Howes Quits Postoffice To Aid Farley In Campaign

New Life in Campaigns

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Campaigns of two Democratic candidates for President took on new life yesterday with the growing assumption that President Roosevelt will not be a candidate to succeed himself.

William W. Howes, First Assistant Postmaster General under James A. Farley, announced he will relinquish his post to return to politics. Howes, closely associated with Farley in the 1932 and 1936 campaigns, is expected to support the Presidential bid of the Postmaster General.

Taking temporary leave of his post with the President's consent, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt announced a speech-making itinerary beginning May 6 that will carry him into virtually every State not supporting a favorite son candidacy. McNutt, who does not believe the President will run, reiterated his assurance that he will not be a candidate if the President announces his candidacy.

President Approved Leave

Postmaster General Farley has made no such reservation, but like McNutt has frequently indicated his belief that the President does not want a third term. Farley and McNutt camps have long been at loggerheads, but Mr. Roosevelt is believed closely apprised of the plans of both men. McNutt made plain in a statement that the President approved of his three-week leave of absence to campaign for his candidacy. And Howes announced his resignation after calling at the White House.

The Postmaster General, just back from a speaking swing Westward and Southward, meanwhile, was re-elected chairman of the New York State Democratic Committee. The committee lauded Farley's record as an American statesman and likewise in resolutions praised President Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman.

Howes, who declined to disclose details of his political plans to White House reporters, said only that he planned to seek reelection as Democratic National Committeeman from South Dakota and to lead an uninstructed delegation from that State to the Democratic National Convention.

Successors Discussed

That he would aid in the campaign of Postmaster General Farley, who brought him here in 1933, was assumed by his friends, although they pointed out that Howes has long considered stepping down from his Government post. Howes has been extremely friendly with the President, and would not be likely to oppose a third term should the President run.

Mentioned as his probable successor as First Assistant Postmaster General was Ambrose O'Connell, now second assistant and a close friend of the Postmaster General. The name of Jesse M. Donaldson, deputy First Assistant Postmaster General, also figured in the speculation.

McNutt, who accepted office as Federal Security Administrator with the understanding that it

Davis Urges U. S. Keep 'Beam of Hope Amid Black Despair;' Kendall Warns Against Succumbing to Propaganda

By Lucia Giddens,
Post Staff Writer

Daughters of the American Revolution, at the opening session of their Forty-ninth Continental Congress, last night loudly applauded "keep America out of war" sentiment in a message from a kindred organization, and saluted the work of the Red Cross in relieving war suffering.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, in the principal address at the opening session at Constitution Hall, declared:

"Let us in this hour of trial of an older world rededicate ourselves to the preservation in America of the conception of the good neighbor; let us resolve to keep the light of that simple creed so shining that in distant lands there may be a beam of hope amid black despair."

Earlier in the program Messmore Kendall, president general, National Society, Sons of the American Revolution, said:

"We should be neutral in this present European conflict. The most important thing for us to do is to refrain from succumbing to propaganda. I believe the great majority of the American people view with horror any thought of our be-

Report Hits Agriculture Instruction

Graduate Schools In Wallace Agency Don't Account for Funds, Says Elliott

The Department of Agriculture's graduate school and similar intra-governmental institutions for the advancement of learning among Federal employes lack full authority of law and fail to account for funds obtained in tuitions and fees, Acting Comptroller General Richard N. Elliott declared in a report to Congress yesterday.

In a detailed report of training and educational activities of 15 Government departments and independent agencies, Elliott called attention of the Speaker of the House and the President of the Senate to the existence of what amounts to post-graduate universities in the Department of Agriculture, the Farm Credit Administration, and the Department of Commerce.

In a letter accompanying the report, Elliott declared his office felt "matters reported" should be brought to Congress' attention and recommended legislation defining the scope of educational programs for Government workers, provided continuation is deemed "proper."

150 Courses Offered

Agriculture's graduate school, the report cited, has grown since its organization in 1921 to an enrollment of 5,000 students, with 150 courses "from advanced subjects usually taught in institutions of higher learning to subjects embracing sociology, economics, human conduct, marriage relations, personnel and business management, and the like."

"Many of the courses," the report added, "deal with so-called changes generally claimed to be taking place in government and human relations, and especially those involving the government and the conduct of business."

Authorization for training programs was found in a statute of 1892 to authorize institutions of higher learning incorporated in the District to have access to Government facilities for research.

Authority Added

Additional authority, the report said, has been provided since June, 1938, under an executive order permitting the Civil Service Comission, in cooperation with Government departments and agencies and public and private institutions of learning, to establish personnel training courses in which credits for transfer and promotion could be earned.

The report called the attention of Congress, however, to "the fact that acts quoted do nothing more than provide that Government records, documents and papers shall be available to students and research workers . . . and authorize the conduct of in-service training courses for the training of employes of the various departments and establishments of the Government."

The report declares that the graduate school, as of December 31, 1939, had on hand cash and Government bonds amounting to $5,705.95, which represented accu-

Nazis Cutting Norway in Half; British Land Troops, Planes And Artillery in North Sector

Narvik Retaken; Reinforcements Leaving England In Steady Stream

By James B. Reston
Copyright by New York Times

London, April 15.—The Admiralty and War Office announced today that British troops have landed at several points along the Norwegian coast, and at the same time Norwegian officials in London announced the recapture of Narvik by British troops and disclosed that Allied aid to Norway was "assuming great proportions."

Utmost secrecy is maintained here about the size of the British expeditionary forces and the points where they have been landed but this is understood—the troops are now in possession of Narvik and the surrounding country.

Speed is now the first principle of Allied strategy in Scandinavia. It is recognized that thousands of men are needed now, with probably better than tens of thousands a month from now, and every effort is being made to expedite reinforcements for the original landing parties.

Troops Leaving All Day

All day ships, of every description, crammed with men, munitions, stores, and tanks, sailed from British ports across the North Sea. From morning to night pleasure steamers at one port carried men and stores out to transport vessels which were convoyed to sea by British warships, several of which had just returned from engagements with the German ships in the Skagerrak and the Kattegat. Even in London troops rumbled through the streets in large buses, evidently en route to ports of embarkation.

An indication of the rapidity of cooperation between Norwegian and Allied officials was given in a message broadcast on behalf of the Norwegian government tonight:

"The help for Norway, which the Norwegian government has asked the British and French governments to provide, is being given, and is assuming great proportions," the message said.

Pilots Aid Troopships

The first sign of this help, the message continued, was the recapture of Narvik and the country around it. Norwegian seamen knowing the fjords have already taken up duties with the Royal navy, and Norwegian officers who will be attached to the Allied expeditionary force, arrived in England today and have already entered into staff talks with British and French officers.

"All Norwegian military and civil authorities were ordered to enter into closest contact with our British and French allies," the statement said, "and to give them all the assistance they can. Every Norwegian subject has the duty to support the authorities in every way and to communicate to them all

A Plan for "Protection"

Norse Publish Nazi Demands For Complete Submission

Surrender of All Forts, Abandonment Of Mails and Wires to Outside World, Blackout of Country Among Terms

By the Associated Press

Stockholm, April 15.—The Norwegian government tonight published a resume of Germany's initial demands for the complete submission of Norway, which it said were first made by the German minister several hours after Germany had started her invasion.

The demands listed were:

1. A proclamation to be made to the people and the army ordering no opposition to Germany.

2. The army to be ordered to make contact with the advancing Germans and give them loyal collaboration. The army to be allowed to keep its weapons if its conduct permitted. All military buildings to hoist a white flag beside the Norwegian flag as a sign of their collaboration.

3. The military buildings needed by Germany to secure Norway against foreign enemies to be delivered undamaged, especially coastal fortresses.

4. Detailed charts of Norwegian mine fields to be delivered to Germany.

5. Norwegian territory to be completely blacked out from the day of occupation.

6. All communications to be maintained at Germany's disposition.

7. No ships to be permitted to sail for foreign ports and no air service to be permitted, with the understanding that maritime commerce would be permitted later to German and neutral Baltic ports only.

8. Norwegian pilots to be instructed to obey German orders.

9. Meteorological service to be continued at Germany's disposition, but all telephone service.

Germans Reported To Have Fired At Swedish Police On Norse Border

Bulletin

Stockholm, Sweden (Tuesday), April 16 (U.P.)—German soldiers opened fire on guards at the Swedish frontier at 2 p. m. yesterday, the newspaper Dagens Nyheter reported today.

When German detachments, the newspaper said, were halted at a railbridge at the border by Swedish police, they opened up with machine gun fire but the policemen were not injured.

By Ralph Forte
United Press Staff Writer

Stockholm (Tuesday), April 16.—German forces today appeared to be cutting Norway in two along a line from Trondheim on the North Sea to the Swedish border at a point near the town of Kopperaen.

Meantime Allied forces, supported by big guns on British warships, were reported expanding their gains around Narvik in the Far North and it appeared the British, aided by Norwegians, were in control of the Norwegian road to the Swedish Kiruna iron mines from which Germany obtains vital ore.

The Germans had broken the Norwegian line northeast of Oslo and were reported about to enter the town of Kongsvinger, 18½ miles from the Swedish border.

Trondheim Not Attacked

The Trondheim operations appeared the most important and indicated that the Germans rapidly were consolidating their control of this area which is the military key to central and south Norway.

There were no reports of major Allied attacks on Trondheim.

Strong German units based on the port drove northeast toward the town of Hegre, where, according to Swedish newspaper dispatches, the Norwegians were offering strong resistance. The Germans occupied Hell, a highway junction, and then advanced about 8 miles to the eastward. They were within 31 miles of the Swedish border.

Other Landing Places

[London military observers, the Associated Press reported, believed the British, besides landing at Narvik might have put troops ashore at Namsos, about 100 miles north of Trondheim, and at Andelsnes, abuot 100 miles south, possibly with the intention of trying to isolate the Germans at Trondheim. From Andelsnes, also, Allied forces could isolate Nazi forces reported at Kristian Sund, 50 miles to the north.]

Sweden Blacks Out

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 15.—The German radio tonight broadcast a warning to navigators that all lighthouses and signal fires on the southern coast of Sweden had been extinguished.

No immediate explanation was available here why a neutral state should darken its coast.

Dousing of Swedish navigation lights caused considerable speculation in Berlin diplomatic circles, which pointed out it is a measure taken only under the most extraordinary circumstances.

Fear Air Attack

Stockholm, April 15 (AP).—A "state of preparedness" against aerial attack was proclaimed today in Swedish provinces bordering Norway and in parts of southern and western Sweden as well, effective at noon tomorrow.

(A British news agency, Exchange Telegraph, said all traffic over the Norwegian - Swedish border had been stopped.)

Final Decision Lies in West, Nazis Believe

Apologies Started In Press for Difficulty In Taking Norway

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, April 15.—The conviction persists in Berlin that the final decision in this war must come from the West Front and that steps designed to force it will come very soon.

The Germans evidently bit off a larger piece of Norway than the British navy will allow them to chew. For the high command communique admits today that while no fighting occurred at Narvik yesterday "strong units of the English navy have blockaded the entrance to the harbor."

Apologies Begun

Late tonight, moreover, the Germans declared no portion of Norway occupied by German troops had been retaken by the British. They admit, however, that they do not occupy the whole Norwegian coast

It is no longer a secret here that the Germans expect to be forced to relinquish Narvik and the press has begun a campaign of apology in this direction. Narvik itself is said to be unimportant since the Norwegians blew up the railroad to Sweden. Moreover, Narvik is so far north that the German units there are more or less stranded.

Claim Goal Is Achieved

Bad weather, it is claimed here, made it inexpedient for the German air force to assist German destroyers in an effort to reupise superior British naval forces at Narvik. There, too, it is said here, in contrast with Trondheim and Bergen, the Germans had no heavy artillery.

Neutral quarters in Berlin, moreover, are inclined to believe that

Rumanians Ban Exports Of Cereals

Danubian Neutrals Agree to Maintain Control of Shipping

By Eugen Kovacs
Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, April 15.—Great alarm was caused here today by a decree of the government economic council which forbids the making of new contracts for exports of cereals. Contracts at present in force may be completely filled.

This began a stream of wild rumors, the most violent of which stated that all exports to Germany had been stopped. This does not agree with the official decree which is limited to cereals and applies to all countries. The explanation for putting an end to cereal exports is that owing to the long and severe winter and heavy flood, labor in the fields has not yet been started and a poor harvest is feared, as usually farm labor begins early in March.

However, the importance of the measure and its possible effect on this country's relations with Germany cannot be overestimated. Cereals and oil form the bulk of Rumanian exports to the Reich and the stoppage of cereal is a very serious matter.

These measures coincide with a greatly changed atmosphere in Rumania with regard to events in Norway. The news of British naval victory in Norwegian waters and the occupation of Narvik and other Norwegian ports by Allied forces has been taken here as a bad blow to German prestige.

Meanwhile the Yugoslav and Rumanian governments have reached an agreement on the intensification of the policing of the Danube, and efforts are being made to induce Hungary to join.

The main purpose of this will be to prevent the possible sabotage of river commerce headed for Germany.

D. C. Merger Bill Pushed In House

Effort to Be Made To Get Floor Vote On Next Monday

By James D. Secrest

A special effort will be made this week to get the Kennedy reorganization bill and the McGehee measure to amend the Unemployment Compensation Act on the House calendar for District Day next Monday.

When releasing a "committee print" of the reorganization bill approved tentatively by a subcommittee Thursday night, Representative Ambrose Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, said he would ask Chairman Jennings Randolph to call a special meeting of the full committee this week.

Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, who returned yesterday from his home district, said he will make the same request with regard to his bill providing he can get a subcommittee agreement today or tomorrow.

McGehee said that he believed an accord can be achieved at a conference of all interested parties with the judiciary subcommittee. He expressed the belief that public hearings will not be necessary.

Representative Herman P. Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, who has sponsored a C. I. O. bill, said he would be agreeable to the conference providing his proposed amendments are considered

U.S. May Hold Seized Nations' Gold Hostage

Move Would Protect American Investments From Nazi Masters

By Felix Cotten.

Wealth in the United States of countries falling under the Nazi military yoke may become a hostage for investments by American nationals in those unfortunate lands, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau revealed yesterday.

President Roosevelt's executive order of last week impounding Norwegian and Danish funds and property located in this country was the "first step," he declared. The Administration is studying the matter, he said, to see what can be done to collect in case the governments of the conquered countries "do no recognize the American ownership of funds which Americans have invested."

American investments in Norway, Denmark and Poland, whether directly or through purchase of securities of those countries, are the Government's first concern, Morgenthau emphasized.

It was intimated that the plan envisaged using only the funds of conquered governments to "offset" seizures.

By impounding Norwegian and Danish wealth, the President prevented the invaders from claiming funds of the conquered govern-

Oslo Dispatches Sent by Germans, Norse Tell Ships

Stockholm, April 15 (AP).—(Via Radio).—The Norwegian government tonight announced it was broadcasting over radio stations still controlled by it the following warning to Norwegian ships:

"Telegrams which you received from Norway signed by the owners are dispatched by German authorities.

"Orders received from the Norwegian Legation in Washington, D. C., or broadcast over the British Broadcasting station, are authentic.

"Masters on the high seas may contact the nearest Allied naval authorities and ought to avoid calling at neutral ports."

Henry F. Welsh Dies at Ring Bouts

Henry F. Welsh, of 1625 Southern avenue southeast, foreman of transportation at the Navy Yard, died suddenly last night while attending the boxing matches at Turner's Arena. He was 48.

Mr. Welsh, whose family said he had been in good health, though working unusually long hours, was at the ringside when he complained of being ill. He was escorted to the lobby, where he died.

British to Halt Reich-Bound U.S. Goods in Pacific

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, April 15.—Armed with figures said to prove Germany is receiving valuable raw materials exported from the United States to Russia, the ministry of economic warfare indicated today extension in full force of the blockade to the Pacific Ocean is only a matter of days if not hours.

Vladivostok, terminus of the trans-Siberian Railway, has long been suspected of being one of the "loopholes" in the blockade. This suspicion is now stated to be a "certainty."

The British assert Germany has been promised freight space for 1,000 tons of goods a day over the Trans-Siberian Railway, as part of the Russo-German trade pact.

The figures show a huge increase in Russian imports of various metals and other materials useful for war.

Based in part on official American export statistics, the comparative figures show that Russia imported only 30 tons of copper from the United States in 1938, whereas the imports were between 60,000 and 70,000 tons during the five months from November, 1939, to March, 1940.

During the same five months of the war, Russia has imported 25,000 to 30,000 tons of rubber, 6,000 tons from America.

Grandmothers' Bad Day

31,000 Nats' Fans Will See President Deliver First Pitch

President Roosevelt was reported last night to be warming up for his "crucial" pitch which will open the major league baseball season at 3 p. m. today in Griffith Stadium.

Affairs of state will be forgotten for the afternoon while the Chief Executive joins 31,000 Washington fans for the initial game between the new-blooded Nationals and the pennant-anxious Red Sox.

Newspapermen who customarily interview the President Tuesday afternoons have been informed that there will be no conference if there is a game. But, should it rain, he'll be back at the White House, as usual, ready to swap verbal pitches with the correspondents.

The weatherman has promised slightly warmer weather for today, but he added occasional light rains also were in the air. Clark Griffith, who runs the Washington club, had announced more specifically that if it isn't raining at game time, "the game will go on."

Eight thousand reserved bleacher seats and 2,000 standing room grandstand tickets will go on sale this morning. A sellout is expected.

Dutch Leonard, Nats' knuckle-ball hurler who won 20 games last year, will face the veteran Lefty Grove a few minutes after the traditional flag-raising ceremonies, which will be led by Vice President Garner.

First player at bat will be Dominic DiMaggio, brother of the Yankees' slugging Joe and expected to be one of the outstanding rookies of the year.

Refugees Tell of Treason

Fake 'Cease-Fire' Orders Saved Nazis After Norse Sank 4 Ships

By Otto D. Tolischus.
Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, April 15.—Dramatic stories of how the Germans lost the 26,000-ton battleship Gneisenau and three cruisers in trying to force the Oslo fjord, but finally won out because of treacherous fake capitulation orders to Norwegian war vessels and forts, are told in the Swedish press today on the basis of reports purporting to come from Norwegian soldiers and sailors who participated in the battle.

These stories, brought to Sweden by Norwegian refugees, are in line with other similar tales of treachery and sabotage behind the Norwegian lines in both the preparation of the mobilization and the actual conduct of the war. The tales are backed up by reports of the displacement and arrest of Norwegian officers who sympathized with the Germans.

As recounted in the Swedish press, the battle for Oslo began at Horten when the Norwegian mine layer Olaf Tryggvason opened fire on the German armada, consisting of German warships and troop transports, at short range as it was entering the Oslo Fjord.

The Olaf Tryggvason, say these accounts, first opened fire with its four 12-centimeter guns on the 5,600-ton Cruiser Emden at a range of 1,000 meters. In two salvos, lasting less than two minutes, the Emden's ammunition chambers had been penetrated. There was a huge explosion and the ship disappeared

Dewey Offers 7-Point Plan To Aid Business

Industry 'Scapegoat,' He Says in Indiana; 2% Club Denounced

By the United Press

Indianapolis, April 15.—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey of New York denounced the New Deal tonight for "bureaucratic interference" with business and offered a seven-point program he said would return the Nation to a normal course of progress.

"Business has been for seven years the scapegoat of this Administration," he said. "Under the subterfuge of correcting abuses by the business few, the New Deal has sought to place all business under the direction of the political few."

He spoke at Butler University Fieldhouse under the sponsorship of the regular Republican organization of Indiana—the first major speech of a swing to the West Coast in his campaign for the G. O. P. Presidential nomination. He said the speech, broadcast nationally, was a continuation of his discussions of "some of the underlying causes of the failure of this country to recover from this New Deal depression."

Maladministration Charged

He accused the New Deal of "lack of integrity" and "moral collapse;" said "bungling and defeatism" were reasons it had failed to solve the problem of 10,000,000 unemployed; branded the Indiana Democratic organization's Two-per-cent Club as "one of the worst forms of political extortion;" and charged that maladministration of the Securities Exchange Act and other regulatory bodies was one of the obstacles to business progress.

He said some of the things the country must do to bring business enterprise to life included:

First. Stop Government policies which discouraged the job-making business life of the Nation. Demand a national administration that will not look upon business as 'the enemy.' Demand an administration which knows business for what it is—the work of the people of the whole nation.

"Redesign Tax Structure"

Second. Stop bureaucratic interference with the management of honest business. Reduce and simplify the number of reports that must be made to the Government.

Third. Put experience, ability and fair play in the SEC and other regulatory bodies.

Fourth. Redesign the tax structure so that it will no longer drive money into the bomb-proof shelters of tax-exempt bonds. Let it come out and go into partnership with new business enterprises.

Fifth. Improve the credit facilities for small business. Encourage the development of credit institutions to fill the gap between short-term loans by commercial banks and long-term financing in the capital market.

Sixth. Put an end to Government policies of defeatism, of ill-conceived experiments, of frantic improving in domestic and foreign affairs. Establish sound and consistent national policies. Restore confidence in our national future.

Seventh. Learn the difference between stopping abuses and grabbing power. Learn again that this country believes in government by law and not government by men.

He's Commissioner Young, Now

John Russell Young (right) became District Commissioner yesterday—and almost pulled the final "scoop" of his long newspaper career. He sauntered unobtrusively into the District Building shortly before noon—to "show Mrs. Young my new office." As he stood in the high-ceilinged room formerly occupied by Commissioner Allen, Young suddenly decided to take the oath of office—24 hours ahead of schedule. Goeffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners, administered the oath

Stassen May be Keynoter

Other developments:

The committee on convention arrangements of the Republican National Committee will meet in Philadelphia today to select a keynote speaker and other convention officials. The choice for the keynote post was believed to lie between Harold E. Stassen, 33-year-old Governor of Minnesota, and Dr. Glenn Frank, chairman of the Republican program committee, with odds favoring Stassen's selection.

Prospects for further primary battles between leading G. O. P. candidates virtually vanished as the deadline for filing in West Virginia passed without entry of either New York District Attorney Dewey or Senator Taft, of Ohio. The last primary filing deadline—Maryland's—will pass this weekend.

Third term Democratic leaders in Texas wired House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn to state whether he opposes a third term and whether he subscribes to the recent statement of Garner managers that "the third term movement is dead." Mayor Tom Miller, of Austin, chairman of the Texas third term movement, wired the queries to Rayburn, who has always supported Garner.

Mrs. Grace B. Reynolds, of Cambridge City, Ind., last night was named regional representative of the Republican National Committee's women's division. Her region will include the District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

Bill for Review Of Agencies Draws Fire

Rayburn Challenges Inclusion of SEC As House Debates

Opening salvos were fired yesterday as the first of three dynamite-laden bills, virtually affecting New Deal agencies and anxiously fought by ardent New Dealers, came up for consideration in the House.

Debate began on the Walter-Logan bill providing for court review of the regulations of more than 100 administrative agencies, while around the legislative corner awaited proposed amendments to the Wage-Hour Act.

The Walter-Logan bill, which New Dealers claim would severely hamper the effectiveness of the agencies, is considered likely to pass the House when it reaches a vote tomorrow. Its fate in the Senate, however, is much more doubtful.

Cox Attacks SEC

In House debate yesterday, Majority Leader Rayburn, one of the fathers of the Securities and Exchange Commission, inquired why the bill proposed to exempt some Government agencies and not the SEC.

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, replied that "that commission has the same philosophy as most of these new Deal agencies that have been set up in recent years whose thinking is apparently rooted in doctrines that emanate from Russia."

Cox stormed that there could be "no greater blunder than to exempt the SEC."

Celler Urges Delay

The only opposition to the bill, asserted its coauthor, Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, "comes from people who are opposed to our form of government."

Walter revealed yesterday that the C. I. O. had circulated a letter urging his defeat in the Pennsylvania primaries next Tuesday. But, Walter added, the effort was futile because he had no opponent.

Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, urged the House to defer action until the President's special committee to study administrative procedure issues its report.

$500,000,000 Spending Seen By Railroads

J. J. Pelley Complains At Monopoly Hearing Of Highway, Water Aid

By John B. Oakes.
Post Staff Writer

Annual expenditure of more than $500,000,000 for capital improvements was envisioned for the Nation's railroads yesterday at a hearing of the Monopoly Committee.

At the same time, J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, demanded "equality of treatment by the Government as between railroads and other forms of transport."

Complaining of "subsidized competition" on waterways and highways, Pelley told the committee headed by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, that the railroads believed no transport agency should "occupy a position in which it receives special favors from the Government."

Dispute on Highways

Pelley's testimony followed by a few hours publication of a report in which Joseph B. Eastman, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, had spoken of the "serious situation, most severely felt by the railroads," resulting from "the fact that agencies which attempt to pay their way are forced to compete with agencies that do not."

However, a sharp conflict between railroad and motor representatives developed over that part of the Eastman report holding that motor vehicles pay too much toward highway costs. While Pelley attacked that part of the report before the committee, Chester H. Gray, director of the National Highway Users Conference, issued a statement that the report was "gratifying" in that it "discloses that highway users are not subsidized."

In his testimony to the committee, Pelley declared that "equality of treatment" by the Government would permit the railroads to meet their "competitive handicaps."

New Money Needed

"I do not hold the view that we have reached the ultimate in railroad development," said Pelley. "To keep abreast of progress, new money will be required. It has been estimated that the railroad industry would be justified in spending $500,000,000 or more annually for new and improved equipment, rails, ties, ballast, machinery for shop and track work, and other capital improvements."

"With a return to better economic conditions and removal of the competitive handicaps now confining the industry, railroad traffic may show so great a future increase that even with increased efficiency in handling it, a greater number of employes will be required," Pelley declared.

In commenting on the Eastman report, Pelley asserted it was only by making the "astonishing assumption" that highway users should pay 40 per cent of highway costs, while general taxpayers should pay 60 per cent, "that the authors of the report manage to arrive at the conclusion that motor vehicles are paying too much toward the cost of the highways built for and used by them."

Cites Missouri Study

Pelley said that studies in Missouri and Illinois show that "big trucks are paying only a fraction of the cost which they impose upon the highways." He added that the Missouri figures indicate a "subsidy" running as high as $615 per truck per year, while Illinois figures run up to $996 per truck per year.

"What the trucking companies pay is spent almost entirely on the roads and streets which these companies use as their place of business," said the witness. "Railroads provide their own places of business and maintain them."

Bankers Fight SEC Trust Regulation

Investment Groups Object to Being Made Finance 'Guinea-Pig'

Investment trusts, comprising pools of investors' money, will be dealt a crushing play by the bill drafted by the SEC for their regulation, the Senate Banking Committee was told yesterday by the spokesmen for industry.

Fifteen thousand industrial leaders would be barred from directorships in investment trusts under the bill, Arthur H. Bunker, executive vice president of Lehman Corporation, testified.

Explaining that investment trusts have about 1,500 industrial stocks in their portfolios, Bunker said that the measure would deprive the trusts of business judgment of industrial leaders.

The investment company business should not be made the guinea pig for a new and novel theory of capital investment that bonds and preferred stocks should be legislated out of future existence," Cyril J. C. Quinn, vice president of Tri-Continental Corporation, insisted.

The bill, presented by Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, banking committee chairman, provides that in the future investment companies shall issue only one type of security, common stock, Quinn said.

"What is the justification for asking Congress to dictate, not truth in securities, but future style in securities?" he asked.

Raymond D. McGrath, vice president of the General American Investors Co., said his $29,000,000 concern "as a practical matter would be legislated out of existence," by the terms of the bill. Under its various provisions his firm would lose virtually all of its directors, McGrath protested.

Despite Troubles America Grew Great

We are exhorted on all sides by calamity howlers. They remind us of our troubles so often that we might be in danger of developing a national inferiority complex, except for one cheering fact:

America has always had troubles—and always will have. Those prone to "view with alarm" were predicting our national doom back in 1837, in 1870, in 1893 and again in 1907. They are still doing it. But they have always been wrong. And meanwhile, fortunes have been made by workers and business men and investors who kept their faith in the future of America in spite of all the evidence that the country was well on its way to the dogs. This nation has actually grown great on its own troubles.

To hear the prophets of doom tell it, you might think there was nothing more to the story than unemployment — deficits — labor troubles — foreclosures — taxes — war in Europe. Troubles, yes, serious troubles, but they are nothing new. We have had all those evils in far more difficult early periods of our history.

History repeats. While the anvil chorus has distracted our attention, recovery from past excesses has been going on again right under our eyes for 8 years. Since 1932, the value of listed stocks, owned by millions of men and women, has risen 30 billion dollars. Annual national income has increased by 16 billions. New industries and amazing new products have been developed. New fortunes have been built. Others are in the building.

American people—132,000,000 of them—will never stop wanting—and getting—more of the things that make for deeper enjoyment of living. Supplying their insatiable demands means that America still offers great opportunities in infinite variety. Men and women who know that this country faces a bright future know, too, that thrift and intelligent investment are the best way to personal independence and national economic security.

In spite of depressions, foreign wars and economic uncertainties, no country in the world has a greater future than America.

World Warned By Roosevelt Of West's Unity

Americas to Meet 'Force With Force,' Union Board Told

President Roosevelt yesterday warned that an attack on the Americas would be repulsed, and in the same breath affirmed his belief in the ultimate superiority of moral law over force and cynicism.

His speech was delivered before the governing board of the Pan American Union and was in commemoration of the union's fiftieth anniversary.

He recalled that at the conference at Lima, Peru, in December, 1938, American republics had agreed "to stand together to defend and maintain the absolute integrity of every American nation from any attack, direct or indirect, from bevond the seas."

The conference at Panama last fall, he said, devised means "for keeping war away from this hemisphere." (The reference was to the neutrality zone agreed to at the conference.)

"To Meet Force with Force"

"I pray God," he said, "that we shall not have to do more than that; but should it be necessary, I am convinced that we should be wholly successful. The inner strength of a group of free people is irresistible when they are prepared to act."

He warned that "in this association of nations, whoever touches one of us touches all," and added:

"We have only asked that the world go with us in the path of peace. But we shall be able to keep that way open only if we are prepared to meet force with force if challenge is ever made."

It was the first public address made by the President since the German invasion of Denmark and Norway.

In formal afternoon attire, grave in his words and bearing, he stood at the head of a long mahogany table in the Hall of the Americas of the palatial Pan American Union Building.

Room Filled

An audience of about 400, composed of Cabinet officers, other high Government officials, Senators and Representatives, and diplomatic representatives of many foreign lands, as well as of Latin-American republics, filled the room to overflowing.

Among those present were the ambassadors and ministers of England, France, China, Australia and Finland. Absent, although they had accepted the invitation to attend, were the diplomatic representatives of Germany, Denmark, Norway, Holland, Sweden, Spain and Greece.

The President held up the relationship between the Americas as a more advanced kind of peace, superior to the European systems of peace by universal conquest, typified by the Roman empire, and "the dangerous and temporary peace of balance of power."

"New Order" Stressed

Peace dwells in the Western Hemisphere, he declared, because the American republics have agreed to mind their own businesses, and to settle disputes by friendly negotiation instead of force.

Declaring that nations of this hemisphere have already found a "new international order;" he said:

"We did not stamp out nations, capture governments or uproot innocent people from the homes they had built. We did not invent absurd doctrines of race supremacy, or claim dictatorship through universal revolution."

Swiggett Reviews Latin-American Trend

Special Dispatch to The Post

Bloomington, Ind., April 15.—Dr. Glen Levin Swiggett, educator and a resident of Washington, tonight inaugurated the first of a series of extra-campus discussions at Indiana University on United States-Latin American relations.

Tracing the background of Latin-American Republics, he said that "whatever may be their political, economic and cultural aspirations, they have largely lacked in relation to one another unity of purpose and effort since their first try at independence."

Excerpts From Address by Roosevelt

Excerpts from the President's address before the governing board of the Pan American Union yesterday in observance of Pan American Day follow:

In the year 1890, on April 14, and without fanfare of trumpets, an Inter-American Conference unanimously adopted a resolution providing that "there shall be formed by the countries represented in this conference an association under the title of the International Union of American Republics."

The idea originated in the mind of Simon Bolivar; and a kindly history has preserved for us the draft he had written in 1825, sketching his purpose and objective.

His aim was for the Americas. His hope was that the American example might eventually give peace to the entire world. His plan was stated in a single, brilliant sentence: "The New World takes shape in the form of independent nations, all joined by a common law which would control their foreign relations and would offer them the stabilizing force of a general and permanent Congress." The result, as you know, was the calling of the Conference of Panama in 1826.

The dream of Bolivar was not realized at the Congress of Panama. But it did remain a hope, an inspiration.

In spite of several attempts to bring to a realization the ideal of inter-American unity, more than six decades went by before the seed began to grow. I am proud of the fact that on that occasion the initiative came from the United States. In 1888, President Cleveland approved an Act of Congress authorizing him to call a conference of the American countries in order that there might be worked out a peaceful plan for the settling of disagreements and disputes, and a means of encouraging such reciprocal relations as would benefit all.

It was that inter-American conference, 50 years ago, that set up the International Union of the American Republics, the anniversary of which we are observing today. In opening the conference, James G. Blaine expressed its high purposes in the following words: "We believe that a spirit of justice, of common and equal interest between the American states, will leave no room for an artificial balance of power like unto that which has led to wars abroad and drenched Europe in blood."

Peace reigns today in the Western Hemisphere because our nations have liberated themselves from fear. No nation is truly at peace if it lives under the shadow of coercion or invasion.

Peace reigns among us today because we have agreed, as neighbors should, to mind our own businesses.

Peace reigns among us today because we have resolved to settle any dispute that should arise among us by friendly negotiation in accordance with justice and equity, rather than by force.

The inter-American order was not built by hatred and terror. It has been paved by the endless and effective work of men of good will.

The cooperative peace in the Western Hemisphere was not created by wishing; and it will require more than words to maintain it. In this association of nations, whoever touches anyone of us touches all of us. We have only asked that the world go with us in the path of peace. But we shall be able to keep that way open if we are prepared to meet force with force if challenge is ever made.

Today we can have no illusions. Old dreams of universal empire are again rampant. We hear of races which claim the right of mastery.

All of this is not of mere academic interest. We know that what happens in the Old World directly and powerfully affects the peace and well being of the New. It was for this very reason that we have adopted procedures that enable us to meet any eventuality.

In my conception, the whole world now is struggling to find the basis of its life in coming centuries.

I affirm that life must be based on positive values.

The value of love will always be stronger than the value of hate; since any nation or group of nations which employs hatred eventually is torn to pieces by hatred within itself.

The value of a belief in humanity and justice is always stronger than the value of belief in force; because force at last turns inward and if that occurs each man or group of men is finally compelled to measure his strength against his own brother.

The value of truth and sincerity is always stronger than the value of lies and cynicism. No process has yet been invented which can permanently separate men from their hearts and consciences, or can prevent them from seeing the results of their ideas as time rolls by. You cannot make men believe that a way of life is good when it spreads poverty, misery, disease and death.

We acclaim today the symbol of 50 years of the American way. We are determined to continue on that way in friendship. We are determined that our mutual relations be built upon honor and good faith. We are determined to live in peace and to make that peace secure. We are determined to follow the path of free peoples to a civilization worthy of free men.

'What Curb?' Driver Asks; Ticket Fixed

Police Find Trees, Signs on Streets Equally Evanescent

Missing curbstones, vanishing trees and invisible sidewalks posed perplexing problems for Washington's police in their ticket-fixing endeavors last week.

Simply stated, one enigma that confronted the law's minions was:

How close to a curb that isn't there must a parker park to obey the ordinance thatorders him to park close to the curb?

Milton Block, of 2929 Connecticut avenue northwest, presented this puzzler to police of the Eighth Precinct. He was among the 88 parking law violators whose tickets were "adjusted" by police last week. The list was released yesterday under order of the Commissioners.

"What Curb?" He asks

Ticketed for failure to park close to the curb in 3400 block of Hawthorne street northwest, Block appeared at the police station and asked disingenuously:

"What curb?"

Two radio patrolmen were dispatched to investigate. In a few minutes they reported:

"There is no curb. And there is no sidewalk. All we can find is a dirt gutter."

The desk sergeant thumbed through the regulations book for a minute. No rule seemed to fit. Exercising administrative discretion, he excused Block with a warning not to violate the law again.

Bennett R. Lloyd, of 2760 Devonshire place northwest, followed on Block's heels and plunked a ticket down upon the desk.

"Two dollars collateral," said the station clerk.

"Wait a minute," Lloyd said. "What's this for?"

The notation on the ticket said: "Pkd. Pub. Pkg."

"That means," the clerk said, "that you parked on the sidewalk in the 2800 block of Devonshire place."

"But there is no sidewalk there," Lloyd remonstrated.

There wasn't. investigation proved. Lloyd was also excused after a warning not to let it happen again.

The vanishing trees were on the list for the second time in two weeks. The trees bore no-parking signs. But the highway department cut them down to widen the roadway. The signs were carted away with the trees.

Signs Weren't There

So Arthur L. Rollins, of 1675 Boulevard avenue southeast, was excused with a warning for parking in the 800 block of M street southeast. He pleaded that he was unfamiliar with the neighborhood. He did not know that the trees that once were there bore no-parking signs.

Of the other parkers who were pardoned, 14 claimed that their cars were disabled; nine said their cars were pushed after they parked; five pleaded that they had stopped momentarily; one said he was unavoidably detained; 12 were making emergency calls; 11 had no previous records; and two were strangers in the city, unfamiliar with the regulations.

Three claimed diplomatic immunity. They were Bjorne Nieisen, listed by police as working at the Japanese Embassy; Bert John Nisonen, of the Finnish Legation; and Carlo Sartori, of the Italian Embassy.

Blossom Fans Undiscouraged By Day of Rain

Hotels Remain Jammed; Weather Man Predicts Some Improvement

A day-long rain yesterday soaked Washington and put to the test the powers of the Tidal Basin's cherry blossoms as a tourist attraction.

To the credit of the blossoms, which were still out in full force, hotels in the capital remained jammed, railroads reported no unusual exodus of visitors and bus lines handled no extraordinary amount of outgoing traffic.

Few sightseers, however, braved the rain to walk beneath the blossoming trees. Most of those who looked at the flowers did so from closed cars.

Warmer Forecast

While rain yesterday sent the day's temperature up to 51 at 1:30 p. m. from a low of 36 at 2 a. m., the weather man promised partly cloudy and warmer weather for today but with local showers in the afternoon.

A survey of the Tidal Basin disclosed only a rain-soaked handful of out-of-town tourists.

Fred Price, from Saugus, Mass., took a pedal boat ride in the rain with his two sons, Donald, 9, and Robert, 6. Price said they were "used to rain like this up around Boston."

Sightseers Carry Umbrella

Nearby on a path were Mr. and Mrs. Mark Pajan, of Pittsburgh, carrying an umbrella.

Two honeymooners, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Herman, of Newark, N. J., were found walking briskly toward the Basin in the rain. Mrs. Herman sported a large orchid, which rivaled the cherry blossoms in loveliness.

Arthur J. Harnett, of the District Hotelmen's Association, said the 29 hotels he represents were still jammed. Tourist homes, however, reported that many visitors who drive their own cars were discouraged by the rain and left town yesterday.

coming involved. Participation in this war would end the principles of freedom which we cherish."

A number of United States Senators and Representatives sat in boxes with D. A. R. State regents and their patries. Lord Lothian, the British Ambassador; Count Jerzy Potocki, the Polish Ambassador; Hjalmar J. Procope, Finnish Minister, were among the special guests.

The Congress opened with patriotic pageantry, as pages in white dresses filed in, bearing the flags of the United States, the 48 States and the District of Columbia. The Marine Band Orchestra played a march as the procession led the national officers to their place on the flag-flanked stage. A huge United States flag was unfurled from the ceiling, as an additional opening flourish.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., of Annapolis, president general of the national society, then called the congress to order. For the seventeenth consecutive time, Bishop James E. Freeman pronounced the invocation for a D. A. R. congress.

Davis pointed out the American Red Cross had decided not to launch a national appeal for its war relief program "until further developments indicate the necessity." He added that, "true to its tradition, the American Red Cross will not act prematurely but when the time comes action will be prompt."

America First

He said "our primary responsibility is to maintain Red Cross service in America, but it is inspiring to know that our people recognize another obligation—the extension of a service of mercy to those who are suffering in other and less fortunate lands."

Davis pointed out more than 3,000,000 hours of service have been contributed by 250,000 Red Cross volunteers in the production of war relief supplies, which he called "the most significant part" of the effort.

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, first vice president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, challenged the D. A. R. to help in the setting up of public affairs forums in their communities to further a better working understanding of democracy.

"It is time for us to leave our clubrooms and to stop talking to ourselves so much about preserving democracy—which we already believe in—and go out into the community" to promote such forums, she said.

Urges Cooperation

She urged that the federation and the D. A. R. cooperate in such a movement. She urged more intensive study of employment and the youth problem. She called for the organizations to help create a demand for abolishing the spoils system from public affairs.

Declaring that "50 per cent of our young people are without religious training," Mrs. Whitehurst said:

"If religion goes out, I'm afraid democracy goes with it."

David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner of the District of Columbia, brought greetings to the opening session, attended by aproximately 4,000.

Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national president, National Society, Children of the American Revolution, brought a brief message from that organization.

Miss Janet Richards, of Washington, a charter member of the D. A. R., and only member to attend every Continental Congress, was named honorary chairman of its golden jubilee by Mrs. Robert. She was presented with a special pin in token of the appointment.

Pilgrims Presented

Miss Kathleen McCoun, young contralto who is now studying in New York after her career was furthered by the D. A. R., sang several solos.

Good Citizenship Pilgrims, who were chosen to represent the 48 States and the District, were presented to the opennig session.

The patriotic ceremony at the start of the program included the reciting of "The American's Creed," led by its author, William Tyler Page; the pledge of allegiance to the flag, led by Miss Florence Deneen, national vice chairman, Correct Use of the Flag Committee; and the singing of the National Anthem, led by Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general.

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, speaking at the prelliminary national defense meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, said "an adequate Navy means a larger Navy than ever before in the history of our country. We are below what our naval experts believe to be adequate for protection and safety."

Senator Walsh stressed that the United States should remain aloof from involvement in the European war. Meantime, he insisted that the Navy should be large enough "to command the respect of the whole world in time of peace" and to deter any would-be invader.

He said that "much is to be done, but we are making progress. In the next few years we will have, I hope, a Navy to defend ourselves against any enemy or combination of enemies."

A small flurry arose in the question period after his address, when a woman in the balcony asked: "How will America stay out of the war when Rome is guiding the President."

Senator Walsh said he didn't care who is guiding the President, so long as he is guided to peace.

Japan's Strength Is Unknown

Senator Walsh said "our Navy planned to be adequate for us in peace times" and added that "it is a has never been on a 5-5-3 ratio, as serious question if Japan today has not as large a navy as we have. Since 1936 Japan has refused to give information on this . . . and no one knows what Japan is preparing in the way of naval armaments."

Other speakers at the defense meeting, which crowded the Mayflower ballroom, were Livingston Hartley author and contributor to The Washington Post; Archibald E. Stevenson, of the New York bar, and Joseph Carleton Beal, of New York, writer and lecturer.

Hartley, speaking on "America and the War," said that "if Germany wins decesively, our future will be imperiled as it has not been since the infant years of our republic."

He declared that the future safety of the Atlantic front "is at stake in the European war . . . And since we shall have to insure its defense if it is threatened, whatever the cost, that means that our stake in the war is nothing less than the future of the American people."

"Our most vital national interests demand, accordingly, that we help the Allies to win this war," Hartley said.

"This would not, in most circumstances we can now envisage, mean 'sending our boys to Europe.' If their foreign exchange and gold was depleted by a long struggle, we might prevent their defeat by credits, loans or other financial action, without sacrificing our neutrality," said Hartley, who is author of "Our Maginot Line."

"If they were in danger from massed bombing of shipping, we could provide ships and convoying warships without incurring disastrous costs and dangers."

He pictured an ominous situation in South America if Germany should win decisively, and if Nazi parties should spring up in South America. He said the United States would then have to play power politics, and "how far we might have to copy the dictatorships in the interests of safety and defense cannot be predicted."

Beal made several oblique thrusts at the White House in his address. He said: "The task of weeding out the actual radical agent from an unsuspecting sympathizer is not an easy one. . . . It is often behind a respected citizen, even unto the White House, that the real Red promoter hides."

At another point in his address, he referred to the American Youth Congress and said that the group which "was thrown out," should have stayed and demanded "its civil liberties," with representation comparable to that of other elements.

"Such American representation with a 'stay in and fight' determination would undoubtedly remove such disgusting maneuvers, resolutions and perhaps a few White House teas," Beal said.

Beal Urges Understanding

Beal said: "Instead of demanding of our Government to give us what we need to exist, we should be giving our Government the type of elected official it needs to exist."

He urged the D. A. R. to promote a better understanding of its organization. He pointed out that sometimes there is a mistaken impression that such organizations are composed of individuals "who feel superior."

Stevenson, speaking on "A New Battle of Books," criticized a "series of social science textbooks by Prof. Harold Rugg," of Columbia University, which, he said, are being used in junior high schools in "more than 4,000 school systems in the United States," and "at this very moment they are actually coloring the minds of several million pupils."

Mrs. Imogen B. Emery, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, chairman of the National Defense Through Patriotic Education Committee, presided at the mass meeting.

"In what do we believe?" she asked, and answered:

"Adequate physical defenses. Therefore we support the acts of Congress dealing with strengthening of our Army, Navy and air forces.

"We believe in building educational defense. We must defend democracy by educating our people to know what are the advantages of life in the United States; we must educate our people to know the subversive influences that are at work here, undermining our structure of Government.

"We believe that we must build up strong moral defenses . . . an understanding of one another, a tolerance toward all races within our domain, tolerenceof opinion, tolerance in utterances.

"Our aim is to educate for citizenship. We must educate ourselves for intelligent expression at the ballot. We must see that our children . . . are educated to believe beyond a shadow of a doubt in the American way.

"We want American history and civil government and social science interpreted by teachers who love and respect and believe in the framework of our Government . . . Our educational system is intended for all who live within our borders . . . What of measures in Congress for Federal control of education?"

'No Scruples Like Kaiser's,' Hitler Quoted

Danzig Official Reports to League On Interview

By the Associated Press

Geneva, April 15.—Dr. Karl M. Burckhardt, an official of the League of Nations, reported today that 20 days before Germany moved against Poland Adolf Hitler declared he "had no such scruples as Wilhelm II" and that he "would fight without mercy up to the extreme limits."

In a report to the League Council on his famous interview with Hitler at Obersalzburg on August 11, Dr. Burckhardt, then League high commissioner for Danzig, portrayed the Nazi chieftain as alternately boasting of Germany's armed might and insisting on his desire for peace.

Hitler said that, although the German army leaders were "cautious" during the Czecho-Slovak crisis in 1938, he had to restrain them in the Polish crisis.

Called Discussions Folly

Burckhardt, who had gone to Hitler in an attempt to arbitrate the problem of Danzig, which was absorbed by Germany after the outbreak of the war last September, reported the chancellor told him "eternal discussions on war were folly and that they brought nations to a state of madness."

The report quoted Hitler as saying of Russia that "Germany knew them better than the others and that hundreds of his officers had served in the Russian army and knew the latter had no offensive power."

Burckhardt also said that Hitler "was sure he could rely on Japanese and Italian alliances."

The Fuehrer then told Burckhardt, the latter said, that "the essence of the matter" was that Germany needed space in the East for timber and colonies in which to raise wheat.

Hitler said that, while the German harvests in 1938 and 1939 were excellent, this was due mainly to the use of chemical fertilizers and that the land soon would be worn out.

The report quoted him as having added that he never would allow the German people to be dragged down into such "want and famine" as they had endured between 1914 and 1920.

Dealings With Poles

On Burckhart's remarking that "the Western powers certainly will be ready to settle this problem by negotiation," the report said:

"Herr Hitler then asked why, in that case, they had stirred up the Poles?

"I replied that I myself was in a position to know that England and France were exercising a moderating influence on Warsaw. Herr Hitler assured me he had made an acceptable offer to the Poles last March, after eliminating the danger of war constituted by Czecho-Slovakia on his southeastern flank.

"He wished to put out two other firebrands—Memel and Danzig—but what was he to do if, every time he took a step, he found England and France in his path?

"Danger Removed"

"Herr Hitler added:

"'We are not acting as we did in Czecho-Slovakia. There a huge danger had to be removed; the solution was a passable one and proved more satisfactory than usually was believed abroad. Calm reigns in Bohemia and the peasants and workers are content . . . All of the difficulties came from the intellectuals.'"

Burckhardt said Hitler praised the "excellent conditions" of the Czech war materials and the quality of the Czech officials, whose "orderly methods" filled the German officers with admiration.

In all respects, Herr Hitler said, they were different from the Poles," the report continued. "The plans of their staff were precise and completely different from the plans of the Polish staff, which then were in his possession.

Polish Army Inadequate

"The technical organization of the Polish army was inadequate and much surprise was felt in German circles at Poland's impudence. Last year the generals had been very cautious but this time it was he who had to restrain them."

After the interview, Burckhardt said, he returned to Danzig, which he found being turned into "an armed camp."

"Herr Von Ribbentrop's journey to Moscow completely upset the situation.

"It may well be thought that, during the decisive fortnight which followed, those in the higher circles of the National Socialist regime lived in the conviction that, in view of the arrangement with the U. S. S. R. and after a rapid victory over Poland, the western powers would not go so far as a general armed conflict. Such was the opinion of Albert Forster (Nazi district leader of Danzig)."

Burchhardt's report was written on December 27, when it was submitted to Lord Halifax, British foreign secretary, and reported to the League of Nations Danzig committee of three. It was returned by Lord Halifax to the League on February 14. But it was not released to the press or communicated to League members until today.

The report concluded on September 1, the day Germany invaded Poland.

information about the activities and movements of the enemy, and about treason and espionage in Norway."

In this regrad Erik Colban, the Norwegian Minister to London, who also broadcast to Norway tonight, told his people to "see that the enemy's scattered detachments are cut ff and unable to move without meeting all the obstructions that the natural conditions of the country provide."

Other Landings Necessary

Although there is general satisfaction at the British landing six days after the German invasion, military experts point out that it will be necessary to effect other landings much further south and in the country which is now more or less controlled by the Germans.

Control of Narvik has this great advantage—that if the Germans attack Sweden, the Allies will be in an excellent position to protect the important Swedish iron ore mines at Koruna and Gallivare.

There is no overland communication between Narvik and Trondheim, Bergen or Stavanger, except through Sweden, and so long as the Swedes remain neutral, there is no chance of the British moving south against the Germans that way.

The Germans are concentrating at Oslo and spreading out from there as along the spokes of a wheel. The Allies have two main immediate objectives—first, to fil the Skagerrak so full of mines and submarines that German troop transports from Denmark will be cut off and the German troops already in Norway will be isolated, and second to cut off German detachments in Trondheim, Bergen and Stavanger from Oslo.

Skagerrak Not Closed

The first of these objectives, according to reliable Scandinavian sources here, has not been attained, despite the fact that the Allies have laid a vast mine field across the Skagerrak, but there is considerable confidence here that the Norwegians have been able to blow up railroads and bridges between Oslo and the Norwegian coast.

It now appears the Allies are going to pour men across the North Sea in the hope that even if a big attack does come on the Western Front, they will be in a position to strike back by air from Norway against Germany's comparatively unprotected northern flank.

R. A. F. Planes Bomb Airport

Throughout today British planes flew up and down the Norwegian coast, despite unfavorable weather conditions. Last night Royal Air Force bombers dropped heavy bombs on the Stavanger airport, which is now in German hands. Anti-aircraft fire was heavy, but according to the air ministry the British planes were not damaged and at least two seaplanes were sunk.

Seaplanes were machine-gunned at their moorings by the crew of a British Blenheim.

Further reports from British submarine commanders say that two German transports were sunk and four other torpedoes found their mark.

The fleet air arm, according to an Admiralty announcement, yesterday attacked German transports and aircrafts at Bergen and "obtained several hits."

Prime Minister Chamberlain, it is understood, will make a statement before the House of Commons on the landings of troops tomorrw.

Stockholm, April 15 (By Radio).—Norwegian military headquarters tonight announced the recapture of Narvik, Arctic ore port, with the aid of British naval units, and said British marines and soldiers had landed at several Norwegian coastal points with new light artillery and complete equipment.

These units have been joined by the Norwegians, the Norwegian command said, and a "great number" of Norwegian pilots, who have been grounded by a lack of warplanes, have been attached to British naval units as a result of the delivery of British planes.

At the same time a government statement broadcast over stations still controlled by it, declared:

"We are continuing to fight. We have received assurances of military assistance from the Allied powers. We are confident that in cooperation with these countries we shall win back Norway for the Norwegian people."

This statement, referring to what it described as the bombing of defenseless villages, where King Haakon has been staying, added:

"Henceforth we mean to keep the place of our headquarters secret."

The Norwegian command ordered Norwegian officers "to cooperate to the fullest extent with their French and British Allies in effectively dealing a crushing blow to German forces occupying the cities and towns of Norway."

The three armies "must coordinate their operations in such a manner as to make them act as one," the command declared in urging its officers to "consult liberally with French and English commanders so as to avoid friction and blunders."

in the deep with 530 men on board.

Behind the Emden came the Karlsruhe. The Olaf Tryggvason scored three full hits on it and it went down with all on board. A third cruiser, supposed to be the Blutcher, was hit by the same boat. It tried to escape but ran aground, and its final fate is unknown.

[In the reference to the Karlsruhe, the Stockholm account is at variance with both German and British official versions, which said the Karlsruhe was sunk off Stavenger. The British credited the submarine Truant, the Germans blamed a Norwegian mine.—Editor's note.]

Then, in the midst of the battle, the account insists, the commander of the Olaf Tryggvason received a radio message purporting to come from the commander in Horten to the effect that King Haakon had ordered Norwegian forces to capitulate. The Olaf Tryggvason ceased firing and the rest of the German armada proceeded past Horten into the fjord.

Forts Open Fire

When it came opposite the Oskarsborg and Seierstein forts further up the fjord, however, both these forts, stationed on top of the sides of the fjord, opened up a concentric firs on the Gneisenau with 28 and 15 centimeter guns. These forts had first been bombed by German planes and this attack, which, according to all previous experience should have put the forts out of action, may have given the Germans confidence to proceed after their losses at Horten.

But the bombing had done little damage and the fire from forts' heavy guns had terrific effect.

Again there was an explosion and the Gneisenau's ammunition chambers blew up in a huge column of fire and fumes. In an incredibly short time the proud ship disappeared below the water, taking with it all the 1,500 lives aboard it.

"It was so frightful," one sailor is quoted as saying, "that we stopped firing."

But, in the meantime, these forts, too, had received a mysterious capitulation order which was to the effect that the Norwegian government had been captured and that a continuation of the battle was useless, because the Norwegian state had ceased to exist. As a result of this order, Oskarsborg surrendered.

From what quarter these fake capitulation orders were sent out can only be guessed at.

A similar story of treachery and sabotage is told by the 3,000 Norwegian soldiers who crossed into Swedish territory from Halden yesterday. According to them, they had to retreat before a small column of German troops because they found that the mechanism of their rifles and machine guns had been either damaged or parts of them removed and that their ammunition was of inferior quality.

With tears in their eyes, officers of the interned troops exclaimed:

"If we had had arms as good as the Swedes have we would have stopped the Germans. The German forces were not light, but we did not discover that our arms were useless until we faced the Germans and tried to use these. Under the circumstances, there was nothing we could do but cross into Sweden."

This troop had been stationed north of Oslo and had been equipped for war in a hurry.

"We are certain," said the officer, "that this sabotage was committed by the supply keepers under direction from Oslo."

Strip-Teasers Under Taboo In London

Pastors, Mothers Protest Britain Entertainment, Demand More Drapes

By the United Press

London, April 15.—The Lord Chamberlain, watchdog of London's morals, showmen and reformers will meet behind the stately portals of St. James's Palace tomorrow to decide the fate of Great Britain's favorite war-time entertainment—the strip tease.

The portralits of England's former rulers will look down on the conference in the one-time bachelor home of the Duke of Windsor, where it will be determined just how few drapes a chorine may wear.

It is generally expected that the conference will heed public protests against the strip tease to the extent of ordering that emphasis be shifted from stripping to teasing.

In deference to the outcries from mothers and pastors, most theater managers already have toned down the acts, especially in the provinces.

Even Edna Powell, blonde stripper of the show "Lord Haw Haw," is temporarily retiring from the stage in her brassiere and panties, and no longer goes the limit, pausing, as she once did, to wave her brassiere before stepping into the wings.

The conference is expected to hit hardest shows such "Strip Ahoy" and "Strip, Strip Hooray," which are now playing in the provinces. In them as many as 12 girls simultaneously disrobe.

The conference will be attended by representatives of the strippers, theater owners, cabaret proprietors and other interested groups, not the least of which is the public morality council headed by the Bishop of London, whose annual report this week deplored the "effect upon impressionable minds, as well as the welfare of girls (doing the stripping), and the liability of approaches to them by men and women for well known purposes."

Convict Wins Clemency

Annapolis, Md., April 15 (AP).—A 25-year-old convict, incurably ill, drew clemency from the State today in response to a plea from his family that he not be forced to die in prison. The convict, James Katzenberger, of Baltimore, was sentenced to 35 years in 14 cases of burglary and larceny.

Stark Urges Navy Building Be Doubled

Spread of Europe's War Compels Big Fleet, Senate Told

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy informed Congress yesterday that recent developments of the European war require next year's shipbuilding program to be more than doubled.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, appearing before the Senate Naval Affairs Committee in support of a two-year program to expand the fleet 11 per cent, testified that "budgetary considerations" earlier this year had forced the Navy to abandon plans for immediately laying down some of the ships carried in the bill.

"The recent developments of the war—developments resulting in an expansion of the war that was anticipated when the original bill was formulated—give renewed and stronger indication that a year's delay in laying down additional ships would be unwise," he stated.

38 Others Next Year

Stark did not reveal the extent of the contemplated supplemental building program but Chairman Walsh of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee made public a Navy Department official statement saying that funds will be asked for actually laying the keels of 25 war vessels in the fiscal year beginning July 1, and for "starting work" on all other ships now authorized or included in the pending measure.

The 1941 naval supply bill, reported last week by the Senate Appropriations Committee, carries funds for laying down 19 warships—two 45,000-ton battleships, two light cruisers, an aircraft carrier, eight destroyers and six submarines.

To these would be added 4 cruisers, 13 destroyers and 8 submarines, under the Navy program, while plans would be drawn and collection of materials begun for some 38 others, the keels of which would be laid the following year.

Building Data Given

Giving data on the building programs of foreign navies, Admiral Stark said the "best estimates" indicate Germany is now turning out seven submarines a month. He said that despite the veil of secrecy thrown around Japanese building activity, the Navy believes that nation is constructing eight "superdreadnaughts" of 40,000 to 43,000 tons, with four more contemplated.

The United States has six 35,000-ton battleships building, two 45,000-tonners getting started, and two more of the latter size projected for next year. Japan has ten in her present fleet, compared to 15 American dreadnaughts in service.

Meanwhile, in another defense development, Acting Secretary of War Johnson announced the release of a twin-motor Martin light bomber for foreign sale. The craft, known as the F-4, is the seventh warplane released under the new policy of allowing the Allies to buy the latest American warplanes. None of this type, however, are on order for the Army or Navy.

Peoples Drug Head Defends Chain Stores

T. N. Beavers Stresses Value in Creating New Markets, Items

Thomas N. Beavers, president of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., told a House Ways and Means Subcommittee yesterday that chain stores voluntarily had created market demand for many products newly produced in this country.

Beavers, president of the chain drug store company which operates in seven Eastern States and the District of Columbia, testified in opposition to the Patman bill to tax chain stores.

As an example of chain promotion of new products, he related that in 1937 Florida growers produced in considerable quantity "a product little known at that time, now known as the Persian lime," and asked the National Association of Chain Drug Stores to help acquaint the public with it.

Steady Demand Created

"A general promotional campaign was launched to serve Persian limes at chain drug fountains," he continued.

"This promotion was very successful and we believe very instrumental in introducing this new product on the market, and has created a steady demand."

John M. Berry, president of the Rome Hosiery Mills, Rome, Ga., said that as a result of large orders he had received from chain stores he was able to give his workers steady employment.

R. F. Sams, jr., of Clarkston, Ga., president of the Vegetable Growers of America, and John D. Neff, of Staunton, Va., declared that chain stores systems were very cooperative in disposing of surplus as well as normal crops.

Dairy Industry Heard

G. A. Boger, of Allentown, Pa., who said he spoke for milk producers in the Lehigh Valley, described retail chain stores as a valuable outlet for dairy products.

A. J. Donahue, a manufacturer, of Milford, Conn., said they were of great importance in distribution.

Beavers categorically denied statements made during earlier sessions of the committee by proponents of the bill.

He said that chains did pay their share of local taxes, that they did not stifle opportunity of employes, and that they were not responsible for "loss leader" selling practices.

The goal of all chain store systems, he said, was to put goods into the hands of consumers as directly as possible from the producer.

Luxemburg, Belgium Guard Against Coups

Guards Assigned To Public Buildings In Invasion Threat

By the Associated Press

Brussels, April 15.—Belgium and her little neighbor, Luxemburg, took unusual precautions today to gard against any internal coup that might accompany an invasion.

The Belgian cabinet announced it had examined "political measures" which already have been taken, and had "considered the situation of foreigners in the country."

The latter statement was assumed to be a reference to agitation by Belgian war veterans for a special police force to guard Belgium's public buildings, airports, railroad stations, banks and public institutions.

Luxemburg municipality took the extraordinary precaution of forbidding more than three persons to assemble in public places after nightfall. Additional civil guards were assigned to public centers.

What action Belgium would take, if only Luxemburg should be invaded was considered to be problematical by observers here, but many Belgians expressed the opinion this country would leave the French and British to defend Luxemburg should be Germans strike in that direction at the Maginot Line.

The Belgians continued to keep their defense organization in a high state of watchfulness.

ments placed in this country for safekeeping.

Morgenthau declared he is acting as "trustee" for such foreign wealth.

Under the President's order, withdrawal of Norwegian and Danish balances is permitted for what the Treasury regards as legitimate purposes.

Many Withdrawals Approved

Morgenthau said he had received hundreds of applications for withdrawal of funds. These relate to transactions dated before the time of the German invasion, he declared, and are being approved rapidly.

Morgenthau said he is setting up a special section to clear the applications. Three experts from New York have already been employed.

Morgenthau disclosed that he may issue a statement shortly to clarify the matter of the decline in the pound sterling rate. He conferred on the subect yesterday with Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Thus far, he declared, there is no evidence that Great Britain is engaging in a competitive devaluation of sterling to boost her export trade to the disadvantage of American producers.

Polish Question Studied

Asked whether German funds held in this country, rather than Danish or Norwegian, might be seized to compensate for investment losses in conquered territory, Morgenthau replied, "We have not crossed that bridge."

A great many Americans, he said, own bonds of the Polish government. Certain funds of the exiled Polish government are held in this country, it was recalled. The whole question as to what will happen to Poland, and to these funds, it was explained, is being studied in the light of protecting American investments.

Elliott Criticizes Graduate Schools

mulated earnings.

"No accounting has ever been made to the Government for any of the school's funds," the report observed.

Dr. Alfred F. Woods, head of the graduate school, receives annually $6,500 in addition to his retirement pay of $1,284 a year due since he left active service in the Bureau of Plant Industry in September, 1938, the report stated.

Dr. Woods, former president of the University of Maryland, pointed out in a statement to The Post that he had headed the school since 1926, but had received no pay other than his Government salary prior to retirement. He pointed out that no appropriation ever has been made by Congress for operation of the school.

McCarl Didn't Object

"Former Comptroller General John R. McCarl looked into the school before he retired and after the Secretary of Agriculture explained it to him he raised no objection," Dr. Woods said.

"It has always been considered that the operation of the school was broader than the framers of the law had intended, but that the act was not specific and the school, therefore, was fully authorized."

The report from the General Accounting Office cited that classrooms, together with telephones, lights and other services are furnished by the Government. "It is said," the report stated, "that the telephone and office space (of the graduate school) are charged to the Bureau of Plant Industry . . . on the ground that Dr. Woods . . . still acts as collaborator of the bureau."

Dr. Woods explained that he handles plant patents for the bureau.

Phones Cut Off, Americans Lost In Norway

Richard E. Cox, first secretary of the American Legation at Oslo, reported to the State Department yesterday that location of many Americans is being hampered by almost complete breakdown of telegraph and telephone service throughout Norway.

Cox reported that his own and the families of Thormod O. Klath, commercial attache, Austin R. Preston, consul; Easton T. Kelsey, vice consul, and Brigg A. Perkins, vice consul, are believed to be safe at a hotel about 20 kilometers from Lillehammer.

United States Minister to Sweden Frederick A. Sterling advised the department wives and minor children of legation officers have been ordered evacuated to the United States. Sterling said that only about one-tenth of the 1,500 Americans in Sweden were trying to leave.

Distress Calls Of British Ship Unexplained

Thomaston, Me., April 15 (AP).—Fragmentary wireless messages indicating the British freighter Craig was under attack by a submarine and another later message, presumably from a Canadian station, that the distress call had been "all cleared up," left the fate of the craft in doubt tonight.

Mackay Radio at New York picked up an S O S from the 3,863-ton Craig, approximately 800 miles northeast of New York at 4:55 a. m.

The Canadian government station at Camperdown, Nova Scotia, received a second call, an S O S.

Nazis Apologizing For Narvik

the German destroyers in Narvik are practically out of commission.

So far as the strategical position in Norway is concerned, however, the Germans contend that their goal has already been achieved. The only essential section of this country for waging war against the British, they claim, is the territory south of the line between Tronjheim and Oslo. From coastal points already in German possession in this sector and already fortified with heavy artillery and mines, the Reich's planes and U-boats, it is argued, can harrass the British.

From Bergen to the Shetlands the Germans have now some 220 miles to travel instead of some 700 miles as previously, and from Stavanger to the Orkneys it is 280 miles, instead of 600. In order for the British to make their attacks against the Reich's forces in Norway successful, the Germans declare, they will have to force them from this sector.

Any damage inflicted on the German fleet last week, moreover, it is contended here, is not decisive for the final outcome of the war.

Fleet Called "Luxury"

The fleet, so far as Germany is concerned, it is stated by informed quarters here, is a "luxury," for the most important weapons of the Reich are the army and air force.

The news agency D. N. B. announced tonight that a German battalion operating in the Kristiansand area defeated three Norwegian battalions supported by artillery and forced them to surrender, capturing 150 officers and 2,000 men.

The agency also announced that the Germans captured a powder factory at Hoenevoss.

It was added officially that the Oslo area is now practically completely cleared of Norwegian troops, of which the greater part, 3,000, were said to have crossed the Swedish frontier today.

Oslo to Frontier

With tonight's capture of Halden by a German column which pushed southward along the main rail line from Oslo to Gothenburg, the Germans claim complete control from the eastern shore of Oslo Fjord to the Swedish frontier.

Other columns were pushing nortohwest and southwest from Oslo, probably aiming at junction with troops striking north from Kristianstand and Haegeland, but apparently were making slower progress.

Admit Baltic Is Mined

Berlin, April 15 (AP).—German officialdom consoled itself tonight over admitted reverses at Narvik by insisting that German reinforcements were pouring into Norway.

Authorized sources admitted that some British mines may have been sown in the Baltic, but one authorized source said there was considerable fantasy connected with that story."

Norway Publishes German Demands

cables and mail to foreign countries to be stopped and traffic with Baltic states to be reduced and controlled by Germany.

10. The press and radio stations to be ordered to carry information as directed by German military authorities, and to collaborate with the military authorities; all radio stations to be turned over to Germany.

11. Export of war materials from Norway to cease.

12. Any proclamations and instructions issued by wireless to be sent only in a cipher unknown to Germany's enemies.

Presented to Koht

These demands were presented, the Norwegian government said, at 5 a. m. on April 9 to Foreign Minister Koht, when German warships already had invaded Oslo Fjord, Bergen and Trondheim and had fought with coastal batteries.

In reply, Koht said he could not make such a decision himself but must peesent it to the cabinet.

The German minister said an answer was urgent, as German action already had advanced so far that the demands must be accepted immediately if there were to be any chance to prevent violence.

The cabinet already was assembled, however, so he agreed to let it decide, said the statement. The cabinet quickly replied that it was impossible for an independent country to accept such demands.

Puppet State Suggested

In a conversation with the King next day, the German minister was reported to have said that the situation now had changed so that Berlin no longer would be content with the demands of the day before and that another Norwegian government in which Berlin could have confidence was necessary. It was suggested that the King recognize Maj. Vidkun Quisling, Norwegian Nazi, as chief of a new cabinet and accept the cabinet already proclaimed by Quisling at Oslo. (Quisling resigned today, Oslo announced.)

The King replied that Quisling's government was another Finnish Kuusinen government (a reference to the government proclaimed by the Finnish Communist, Otto Kuusinen when Soviet Russia invaded Finland last November 30).

Koht declared the old cabinet was willing to resign, however, if Berlin could accept a friendly government made up of other members. The German minister replied that the question of other ministers could be discussed but that the German Fuehrer had decided Quisling must be accepted as the chief.

King Haakon answered "no."

French Patrols Push Far Into German Territory

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 15.—Seldom since mid-October has the French front been so agitated as today, and this despite bad weather with much rain. Scouting parties have pushed far into German territory.

After the announcement last Wednesday that many signs presaged an early German attack, there followed two days of tense expectation, with relative calm in no man's land. Then both infantry and artilley became active again, day and night, with skirmishes increasing2in intensity, as well as frequency, at all sensitive points. Now the Allies seem bent on ascertaining the enemy's intentions.

Patrols are stronger than hitherto. Two such patrols prospected kep points today—one east of the Moselle River and the other "at the Palantinate frontier." This phrasing, used for the first time, seems to indicate that the party went deep into the German lines. The frontier in question runs approximately from the Bitche sector eastward to the Rhine; the northern edge of the Bitche platau is about 3 miles frmo German soil. Both scouting parties met enemy detachments as they returned, and there was sharp fighting.

Quisling Resigns; Province Governor Named Successor

Oslo, April 15 (AP).—The Oslo German-controlled broadcasting station tonight reported that Maj. Vidkun Quisling had resigned as prime minister of the puppet government he set up after the German invasion and had been replaced by Province Governor Oingolf Elster Christensen.

Quisling was made chief of demobilization (presumably of the Norwegian forces in German-occupied territory).

The radio station announced a governmental committee had been appointed to take the lead in administering German-occupied districts.

It was announced representatives of this committee had been received by German authorities to whom they declared their loyal attitude.

Born in 1872, Christensen is a former captain in the Norwegian army. He was minister of justice in 1926, defense minister 1926-1928 and is an officer of the Legion of Honor.

The Federal Diary:

Merit Appeal Handlers Bar Private Plaints

Hearings on Bills Open to Unions, Legislators, Executives

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Hearings on the long-sought appeals system for Federal employes will be steered away from becoming an open forum for individual grievances, Chairman Ramspect of the House Civil Service Committee said yesterday.

The committee will open the hearings at 10 a. m. today on a sheaf of bills for various types of appeals machinery, and Representative Ramspeck said he hopes to complete the testimony in two or three sessions.

Time will be open to representatives of employe unions, which have long been campaigning for an appeals system. The gates, however, will be up against individuals who might seek to use the committee as an appeals court, after the way of the Ellender hearings last year.

Some Question Need

In addition to the employe union members, the committee expects to hear from members of Congress, including some who have sponsored appeals legislation, the Civil Service Commission, and Government executives.

Need for the appeals system, it was indicated yesterday, is questioned by some Government administrators, who hold that present facilities for smoothing out clashes between employes and their bosses are satisfying both sides in all but the rarest cases. These facilities include the personnel divisions, where the main flow of grievances can be ironed out, and "shop" committees, representing both sides, to handle the sharpest disputes.

McNutt Has Other Ideas

One committee has been operating in the Civil Service Commission for seven years. Set up by Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell, the committee of conciliation includes three administrators, three employes. From about 1,700 employes of the commission, an average of 4 a year have brought complaints to the committee, with half seeking changes in their efficiency ratings.

Among those who have challenged outright the need for an appeals system is Federal Security Administrator McNutt, who recently told the Society for Personal Administration that causes of employe grievances are best cut down through "proper selection of supervisors and employes," thorough training of both, and proper payment for work performed."

"Any employer who is guilty of unfair treatment of employes should not be retained on his job," he said. "The remedy for his bias is not an outside appeals board to reverse him."

Note for a chilly spring: Under glass and framed in chromium, this message still occupies the central and only spot on one Justice Department bulletin board: "Christmas Mailing, Please Mail Early."

Secretaries and undersecretaries for Congressmen would be given a way into Civil Service under a bill sponsored by Representative Sheridan (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

The measure would permit the secretaries to receive classified status after "suitable" civil service tests at the completion of a year on Capitol Hill, and open the way for their transfer to other classified jobs.

Representative Sheridan said that many of the Capitol Hill employes have long desired such legislation, and that their experience "certainly" entitles them to "the same benefits as enjoyed by those persons who have civil service status."

Calendar: Three color movies, "The Trail of the Great Divide," "Gaspe" and "Canadian Rockies Holiday," will be shown by the National Park Service at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Departmental Auditorium . . . Kurt Hetzel will conduct the spring concert of the Treasury Department Orchestra, at 8:30 p. m. today in the Commerce Department Auditorium.

Operetta Planned

A Dutch operetta, "Tulip Time," will be presented by the Sacred Heart Academy at 8:15 o'clock tonight at the school auditorium, 1621 Park road northwest. The operetta is directed by Dorothy Mason Walton, with the musical score by Eugene Johnston.

Arson Is Suspected In 3 Baltimore Fires

Baltimore, April 15 (AP).—Declaring that three fires which destroyed two homes and damaged another in Evergreen Park early today were "apparently a very professional job of house burning," Baltimore County police began an investigation of possible arson today.

Two of the houses were in flames and a third smoldering when firemen arrived. Fireman said they found the third house to have been saturated with kerosene, with oily rags on both floors, and the walls and baseboards wet with oil.

Dewey Displaces Roosevelt As 'Best Voice of Our Time'

Voice Expert Says President Has Slipped Since First 'Chat'

LORAINE OSBORN

The voice of Thomas E. Dewey, the amateur singer and Presidential contender, yesterday was rated a "tops" of 100, or 10 points better than that of President Roosevelt—once "the best voice of our time."

Miss Loraine Osborn, author of "Your Voice Personality," a recent best seller, so ranked the vocal qualifications of the gang-busting G. O. P. hope and the President. She declared Dewey's voice was sweet with "musical overtones."

Though marked with "optimism," the voice of the President, she indicated, has slipped 10 points since he first swayed a radio audience with a fireside chat, seven years ago.

Miss Osborn, who betrays no Yankee twang in her own speech, despite her New England upbringing (she was reared in New Britain, Conn., and studied at the Hartford Conservatory of Music) did not limit her analysis here yesterday to White House candidates.

After calling Senator Vandenberg's voice "nice" the author-lecturer characterized the speech of visiting D. A. R. members "above average" and even praised the vocal attributes of local cab drivers.

"They are certainly fine and friendly talkers," she asserted.

The voices of Hitler and Mussolini, however, were roundly scored as "harsh and strident . . . showing just what they are."

Chief G-Man J. Edgar Hoover has "great strength and virility" in his speech, Miss Osborn continued. The Southern drawl of Secretary of State Hull she praised in this way: "His voice shows you could not hurry him into anything rash."

On Dewey she dwelled. The voice tipped her off to a personality "both magnetic and dynamic." She is interested in Dorothy Thompson's voice. It sounds like she "was on verge of a nervous breakdown, but what she has to say is always good."

She denounced the "bored, drawling" voices of New York debutantes, and advised all and sundry that the voice desired is:

Sincere, warm, enthusiastic, of correct pitch, resonant, magnetic and dynamic.

The voice undesired is whining, in monotone, throaty, thin and negative. Generally, women pitch their voices too high, or talk from back in their throats. Men, generally, have best voices, she said.

The New York City voice is the worst of all, she thinks.

District Committee Approves Parole Changes, Other Bills

Revisions in the District indeterminate sentence and parole act, along with four other local bills, were approved yesterday by the House District Committee so they may be called up next Monday.

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., a member of the District Parole Board, explained that the amendments were unopposed and that they are needed to iron out conflicts which have arisen between the local and Federal parole acts.

One of the major changes, he said, is to make the District law with respect to minimum sentences conform with the United States act. At present the District may grant paroles after one-fifth of the sentence has been served, whereas the Justice Department requires that one-third of the sentence be served.

Chairman Jennings Randolph paid tribute to the work of the District Parole Board after Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, asked LaRoe whether the board had not been criticized for leniency.

The committee approved the Schulte bill to liberalize the police and firemen's retirement law to permit voluntary retirement after 25 years' service.

Bills to provide for more strict regulation of dentistry and to govern the profession of podiatry were approved by the committee upon recommendation of the public health sub-committee. The fifth bill authorizes the issuance of a healing art license to Dr. A. L. Ridings.

Lane High Students To Attend Conference

Charlottesville, Va., April 15.—The student council of Lane High School has elected the following delegates to the State student council conference, to be held in Newport News April 26-27: Betty Ann Behrendt, Jack Murray, Stephen Martin, Patsy Davis and Haywood France.

Lane High also will be represented in the spelling, reading and public speaking contests at the Virginia Literary and Athletic League tournament in Lynchburg April 26. Harvey Mitchell was selected by a series of tests to compete in the spelling contest, and Holcombe Campbell will be substitute. Mary Jane Sneed and Timothy Smith will be the school's entries in the public speaking contest. Representatives in public reading have yet to be chosen.

Md. Judge Signs Order Enforcing Closed Shop

Baltimore, April 15 (AP).—An injunction order enforcing a closed shop agreement of a maritime labor group was signed today by Supreme Court Judge Eugene O'Dunne.

The action was taken in proceedings brought by the United Licensed Officers of the United States, the labor group, against the Baltimore Mail Steamship Co. and the United States Lines.

along with those in the McGehee bill.

The "committee print" of the Kennedy reorganization bill substantiated previous unconfirmed reports that the Citizens' Advisory Council had been stricken from the measure.

It also revealed that the Commissioners will be given more discretion in the selection of new department heads as language specifying that incumbents shall be retained has been stricken.

Qualifications of the administrative assistant as written into the bill are that he shall be a graduate of a college or university of recognized standing, and possess "understanding and experience in responsible supervisory positions, marked administrative ability, a thorough knowledge of the general laws of the District and the policies of administration, keen analytical ability, quick perception and appreciation of relative values, and judicial temperament."

Authority Is Limited

The revised bill carries a curb on the authority of the Commissioners to shake up the departments after enactment of the reorganization law.

While giving the District heads power to reshuffle divisions within departments, the measure carries the following restrictive proviso:

"Provided, however, that no department, board, or commission shall be created or abolished without the specific authority of Congress, except as provided by Section 210 of this title."

Section 210 authorizes the absorption of various professional licensing boards by the license department.

Purchase Authority Recalled

"To enact reasonable regulations to secure and promote the general welfare of the inhabitants of the District, by them deemed proper for the safety, health, peace, good order, comfort, convenience, and morals of the District."

The subcommittee also eliminated authority for the District to supervise the disbursements of appropriations and the purchasing of supplies by the various quasi-Federal agencies, such as the zoo, the militia, the National Capital Parks, and the U. S. engineer's office.

The bill carries a new penalty of a fine up to $500 for the violation of any section.

The final paragraph states that the law shall take effect "at such time or times as the Commissioners may designate, not to exceed, however, 90 days from the approval of this act" except for the provision abolishing the licensing boards and that creating the District civil system. These would become effective July 1, 1941.

Incumbents who are no longer protected in their jobs by reason of elimination of provisions for their retention are: The auditor, the corporation counsel, the police chief, the fire chief, the director of vehicles and traffic, the welfare director, the superintendent of insurance, and the assessor.

The subcommittee struck from the bill the Commissioners' proposal to set up a division for the recording of liens against motor vehicles in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic despite a general civic demand for the agency.

The House District Committee a week ago promised spokesmen for motorists' organizations that the proposal, which also is carried in a separate bill, would be considered by the reorganization subcommittee.

The division is opposed only by the recorder of deeds, William J. Thompkins, who asks that his office retain control of the records.

Peoples Drug Head Defends Chain Stores

T. N. Beavers Stresses Value in Creating New Markets, Items

Thomas N. Beavers, president of Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., told a House Ways and Means Subcommittee yesterday that chain stores voluntarily had created market demand for many products newly produced in this country.

Beavers, president of the chain drug store company which operates in seven Eastern States and the District of Columbia, testified in opposition to the Patman bill to tax chain stores.

As an example of chain promotion of new products, he related that in 1937 Florida growers produced in considerable quantity "a product little known at that time, now known as the Persian lime," and asked the National Association of Chain Drug Stores to help acquaint the public with it.

Steady Demand Created

"A general promotional campaign was launched to serve Persian limes at chain drug fountains," he continued.

"This promotion was very successful and we believe very instrumental in introducing this new product on the market, and has created a steady demand."

John M. Berry, president of the Rome Hosiery Mills, Rome, Ga., said that as a result of large orders he had received from chain stores he was able to give his workers steady employment.

R. F. Sams, jr., of Clarkston, Ga., president of the Vegetable Growers of America, and John D. Neff, of Staunton, Va., declared that chain stores systems were very cooperative in disposing of surplus as well as normal crops.

Dairy Industry Heard

G. A. Boger, of Allentown, Pa., who said he spoke for milk producers in the Lehigh Valley, described retail chain stores as a valuable outlet for dairy products.

A. J. Donahue, a manufacturer, of Milford, Conn., said they were of great importance in distribution.

Beavers categorically denied statements made during earlier sessions of the committee by proponents of the bill.

He said that chains did pay their share of local taxes, that they did not stifle opportunity of employes, and that they were not responsible for "loss leader" selling practices.

The goal of all chain store systems, he said, was to put goods into the hands of consumers as directly as possible from the producer.

French Patrols Push Far Into German Territory

Copyright by New York Times

Paris, April 15.—Seldom since mid-October has the French front been so agitated as today, and this despite bad weather with much rain. Scouting parties have pushed far into German territory.

After the announcement last Wednesday that many signs presaged an early German attack, there followed two days of tense expectation, with relative calm in no man's land. Then both infantry and artillery became active again, day and night, with skirmishes increasing2in intensity, as well as frequency, at all sensitive points. Now the Allies seem bent on ascertaining the enemy's intentions.

Patrols are stronger than hitherto. Two such patrols prospected kep points today—one east of the Moselle River and the other "at the Palantinate frontier." This phrasing, used for the first time, seems to indicate that the party went deep into the German lines. The frontier in question runs approximately from the Bitche sector eastward to the Rhine; the northern edge of the Bitche platau is about 3 miles frmo German soil. Both scouting parties met enemy detachments as they returned, and there was sharp fighting.

Quisling Resigns; Province Governor Named Successor

Oslo, April 15 (AP).—The Oslo German-controlled broadcasting station tonight reported that Maj. Vidkun Quisling had resigned as prime minister of the puppet government he set up after the German invasion and had been replaced by Province Governor Oingolf Elster Christensen.

Quisling was made chief of demobilization (presumably of the Norwegian forces in German-occupied territory).

The radio station announced a governmental committee had been appointed to take the lead in administering German-occupied districts.

It was announced representatives of this committee had been received by German authorities to whom they declared their loyal attitude.

Born in 1872, Christensen is a former captain in the Norwegian army. He was minister of justice in 1926, defense minister 1926-1928 and is an officer of the Legion of Honor.

the German destroyers in Narvik are practically out of commission.

So far as the strategical position in Norway is concerned, however, the Germans contend that their goal has already been achieved. The only essential section of this country for waging war against the British, they claim, is the territory south of the line between Tronjheim and Oslo. From coastal points already in German possession in this sector and already fortified with heavy artillery and mines, the Reich's planes and U-boats, it is argued, can harrass the British.

From Bergen to the Shetlands the Germans have now some 220 miles to travel instead of some 700 miles as previously, and from Stavanger to the Orkneys it is 280 miles, instead of 600. In order for the British to make their attacks against the Reich's forces in Norway successful, the Germans declare, they will have to force them from this sector.

Any damage inflicted on the German fleet last week, moreover, it is contended here, is not decisive for the final outcome of the war.

Fleet Called "Luxury"

The fleet, so far as Germany is concerned, it is stated by informed quarters here, is a "luxury," for the most important weapons of the Reich are the army and air force.

The news agency D. N. B. announced tonight that a German battalion operating in the Kristiansand area defeated three Norwegian battalions supported by artillery and forced them to surrender, capturing 150 officers and 2,000 men.

The agency also announced that the Germans captured a powder factory at Hoenevoss.

It was added officially that the Oslo area is now practically completely cleared of Norwegian troops, of which the greater part, 3,000, were said to have crossed the Swedish frontier today.

Oslo to Frontier

With tonight's capture of Halden by a German column which pushed southward along the main rail line from Oslo to Gothenburg, the Germans claim complete control from the eastern shore of Oslo Fjord to the Swedish frontier.

Other columns were pushing nortohwest and southwest from Oslo, probably aiming at junction with troops striking north from Kristianstand and Haegeland, but apparently were making slower progress.

Admit Baltic Is Mined

Berlin, April 15 (AP).—German officialdom consoled itself tonight over admitted reverses at Narvik by insisting that German reinforcements were pouring into Norway.

Authorized sources admitted that some British mines may have been sown in the Baltic, but one authorized source said there was considerable fantasy connected with that story."

cables and mail to foreign countries to be stopped and traffic with Baltic states to be reduced and controlled by Germany.

10. The press and radio stations to be ordered to carry information as directed by German military authorities, and to collaborate with the military authorities; all radio stations to be turned over to Germany.

11. Export of war materials from Norway to cease.

12. Any proclamations and instructions issued by wireless to be sent only in a cipher unknown to Germany's enemies.

Presented to Koht

These demands were presented, the Norwegian government said, at 5 a. m. on April 9 to Foreign Minister Koht, when German warships already had invaded Oslo Fjord, Bergen and Trondheim and had fought with coastal batteries.

In reply, Koht said he could not make such a decision himself but must peesent it to the cabinet.

The German minister said an answer was urgent, as German action already had advanced so far that the demands must be accepted immediately if there were to be any chance to prevent violence.

The cabinet already was assembled, however, so he agreed to let it decide, said the statement. The cabinet quickly replied that it was impossible for an independent country to accept such demands.

Puppet State Suggested

In a conversation with the King next day, the German minister was reported to have said that the situation now had changed so that Berlin no longer would be content with the demands of the day before and that another Norwegian government in which Berlin could have confidence was necessary. It was suggested that the King recognize Maj. Vidkun Quisling, Norwegian Nazi, as chief of a new cabinet and accept the cabinet already proclaimed by Quisling at Oslo. (Quisling resigned today, Oslo announced.)

The King replied that Quisling's government was another Finnish Kuusinen government (a reference to the government proclaimed by the Finnish Communist, Otto Kuusinen when Soviet Russia invaded Finland last November 30).

Koht declared the old cabinet was willing to resign, however, if Berlin could accept a friendly government made up of other members. The German minister replied that the question of other ministers could be discussed but that the German Fuehrer had decided Quisling must be accepted as the chief.

King Haakon answered "no."

Luxemburg, Belgium Guard Against Coups

Guards Assigned To Public Buildings In Invasion Threat

By the Associated Press

Brussels, April 15.—Belgium and her little neighbor, Luxemburg, took unusual precautions today to gard against any internal coup that might accompany an invasion.

The Belgian cabinet announced it had examined "political measures" which already have been taken, and had "considered the situation of foreigners in the country."

The latter statement was assumed to be a reference to agitation by Belgian war veterans for a special police force to guard Belgium's public buildings, airports, railroad stations, banks and public institutions.

Luxemburg municipality took the extraordinary precaution of forbidding more than three persons to assemble in public places after nightfall. Additional civil guards were assigned to public centers.

What action Belgium would take, if only Luxemburg should be invaded was considered to be problematical by observers here, but many Belgians expressed the opinion this country would leave the French and British to defend Luxemburg should be Germans strike in that direction at the Maginot Line.

The Belgians continued to keep their defense organization in a high state of watchfulness.

ments placed in this country for safekeeping.

Morgenthau declared he is acting as "trustee" for such foreign wealth.

Many Withdrawals Approved

Morgenthau said he had received hundreds of applications for withdrawal of funds. These relate to transactions dated before the time of the German invasion, he declared, and are being approved rapidly.

Morgenthau said he is setting up a special section to clear the applications. Three experts from New York have already been employed.

Morgenthau disclosed that he may issue a statement shortly to clarify the matter of the decline in the pound sterling rate. He conferred on the subect yesterday with Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. Thus far, he declared, there is no evidence that Great Britain is engaging in a competitive devaluation of sterling to boost her export trade to the disadvantage of American producers.

Polish Question Studied

Asked whether German funds held in this country, rather than Danish or Norwegian, might be seized to compensate for investment losses in conquered territory, Morgenthau replied, "We have not crossed that bridge."

A great many Americans, he said, own bonds of the Polish government. Certain funds of the exiled Polish government are held in this country, it was recalled. The whole question as to what will happen to Poland, and to these funds, it was explained, is being studied in the light of protecting American investments.

mulated earnings.

"No accounting has ever been made to the Government for any of the school's funds," the report observed.

Dr. Alfred F. Woods, head of the graduate school, receives annually $6,500 in addition to his retirement pay of $1,284 a year due since he left active service in the Bureau of Plant Industry in September, 1938, the report stated.

Dr. Woods, former president of the University of Maryland, pointed out in a statement to The Post that he had headed the school since 1926, but had received no pay other than his Government salary prior to retirement. He pointed out that no appropriation ever has been made by Congress for operation of the school.

McCarl Didn't Object

"Former Comptroller General John R. McCarl looked into the school before he retired and after the Secretary of Agriculture explained it to him he raised no objjection," Dr. Woods said.

"It has always been considered that the operation of the school was broader than the framers of the law had intended, but that the act was not specific and the school, therefore, was fully authorized."

The report from the General Accounting Office cited that classrooms, together with telephones, lights and other services are furnished by the Government. "It is said," the report stated, "that the telephone and office space (of the graduate school) are charged to the Bureau of Plant Industry . . . on the ground that Dr. Woods . . . still acts as collaborator of the bureau."

Dr. Woods explained that he handles plant patents for the bureau.

Distress Calls Of British Ship Unexplained

Thomaston, Me., April 15 (AP).—Fragmentary wireless messages indicating the British freighter Craig was under attack by a submarine and another later message, presumably from a Canadian station, that the distress call had been "all cleared up," left the fate of the craft in doubt tonight.

Mackay Radio at New York picked up an S O S from the 3,863-ton Craig, approximately 800 miles northeast of New York at 4:55 a. m.

The Canadian government station at Camperdown, Nova Scotia, received a second call, an S O S.

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Hearings on the long-sought appeals system for Federal employes will be steered away from becoming an open forum for individual grievances, Chairman Ramspect of the House Civil Service Committee said yesterday.

The committee will open the hearings at 10 a. m. today on a sheaf of bills for various types of appeals machinery, and Representative Ramspeck said he hopes to complete the testimony in two or three sessions.

Time will be open to representatives of employe unions, which have long been campaigning for an appeals system. The gates, however, will be up against individuals who might seek to use the committee as an appeals court, after the way of the Ellender hearings last year.

Some Question Need

In addition to the employe union members, the committee expects to hear from members of Congress, including some who have sponsored appeals legislation, the Civil Service Commission, and Government executives.

Need for the appeals system, it was indicated yesterday, is questioned by some Government administrators, who hold that present facilities for smoothing out clashes between employes and their bosses are satisfying both sides in all but the rarest cases. These facilities include the personnel divisions, where the main flow of grievances can be ironed out, and "shop" committees, representing both sides, to handle the sharpest disputes.

McNutt Has Other Ideas

One committee has been operating in the Civil Service Commission for seven years. Set up by Commissioner Harry B. Mitchell, the committee of conciliation includes three administrators, three employes. From about 1,700 employes of the commission, an average of 4 a year have brought complaints to the committee, with half seeking changes in their efficiency ratings.

Among those who have challenged outright the need for an appeals system is Federal Security Administrator McNutt, who recently told the Society for Personal Administration that causes of employe grievances are best cut down through "proper selection of supervisors and employes," thorough training of both, and proper payment for work performed."

"Any employer who is guilty of unfair treatment of employes should not be retained on his job," he said. "The remedy for his bias is not an outside appeals board to reverse him."

Note for a chilly spring: Under glass and framed in chromium, this message still occupies the central and only spot on one Justice Department bulletin board: "Christmas Mailing, Please Mail Early."

Secretaries and undersecretaries for Congressmen would be given a way into Civil Service under a bill sponsored by Representative Sheridan (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

The measure would permit the secretaries to receive classified status after "suitable" civil service tests at the completion of a year on Capitol Hill, and open the way for their transfer to other classified jobs.

Representative Sheridan said that many of the Capitol Hill employes have long desired such legislation, and that their experience "certainly" entitles them to "the same benefits as enjoyed by those persons who have civil service status."

Calendar: Three color movies, "The Trail of the Great Divide," "Gaspe" and "Canadian Rockies Holiday," will be shown by the National Park Service at 8 p. m. tomorrow in the Departmental Auditorium . . . Kurt Hetzel will conduct the spring concert of the Treasury Department Orchestra, at 8:30 p. m. today in the Commerce Department Auditorium.

Operetta Planned

A Dutch operetta, "Tulip Time," will be presented by the Sacred Heart Academy at 8:15 o'clock tonight at the school auditorium, 1621 Park road northwest. The operetta is directed by Dorothy Mason Walton, with the musical score by Eugene Johnston.

Arson Is Suspected In 3 Baltimore Fires

Baltimore, April 15 (AP).—Declaring that three fires which destroyed two homes and damaged another in Evergreen Park early today were "apparently a very professional job of house burning," Baltimore County police began an investigation of possible arson today.

Two of the houses were in flames and a third smoldering when firemen arrived. Fireman said they found the third house to have been saturated with kerosene, with oily rags on both floors, and the walls and baseboards wet with oil.

Dewey Displaces Roosevelt As 'Best Voice of Our Time'

LORAINE OSBORN

The voice of Thomas E. Dewey, the amateur singer and Presidential contender, yesterday was rated a "tops" of 100, or 10 points better than that of President Roosevelt—once "the best voice of our time."

Miss Loraine Osborn, author of "Your Voice Personality," a recent best seller, so ranked the vocal qualifications of the gang-busting G. O. P. hope and the President. She declared Dewey's voice was sweet with "musical overtones."

Though marked with "optimism," the voice of the President, she indicated, has slipped 10 points since he first swayed a radio audience with a fireside chat, seven years ago.

Miss Osborn, who betrays no Yankee twang in her own speech, despite her New England upbringing (she was reared in New Britain, Conn., and studied at the Hartford Conservatory of Music) did not limit her analysis here yesterday to White House candidates.

After calling Senator Vandenberg's voice "nice" the author-lecturer characterized the speech of visiting D. A. R. members "above average" and even praised the vocal attributes of local cab drivers.

"They are certainly fine and friendly talkers," she asserted.

The voices of Hitler and Mussolini, however, were roundly scored as "harsh and strident . . . showing just what they are."

Chief G-Man J. Edgar Hoover has "great strength and virility" in his speech, Miss Osborn continued. The Southern drawl of Secretary of State Hull she praised in this way: "His voice shows you could not hurry him into anything rash."

On Dewey she dwelled. The voice tipped her off to a personality "both magnetic and dynamic." She is interested in Dorothy Thompson's voice. It sounds like she "was on verge of a nervous breakdown, but what she has to say is always good."

She denounced the "bored, drawling" voices of New York debutantes, and advised all and sundry that the voice desired is:

Sincere, warm, enthusiastic, of correct pitch, resonant, magnetic and dynamic.

The voice undesired is whining, in monotone, throaty, thin and negative. Generally, women pitch their voices too high, or talk from back in their throats. Men, generally, have best voices, she said.

The New York City voice is the worst of all, she thinks.

District Committee Approves Parole Changes, Other Bills

Revisions in the District indeterminate sentence and parole act, along with four other local bills, were approved yesterday by the House District Committee so they may be called up next Monday.

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., a member of the District Parole Board, explained that the amendments were unopposed and that they are needed to iron out conflicts which have arisen between the local and Federal parole acts.

One of the major changes, he said, is to make the District law with respect to minimum sentences conform with the United States act. At present the District may grant paroles after one-fifth of the sentence has been served, whereas the Justice Department requires that one-third of the sentence be served.

Chairman Jennings Randolph paid tribute to the work of the District Parole Board after Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, asked LaRoe whether the board had not been criticized for leniency.

The committee approved the Schulte bill to liberalize the police and firemen's retirement law to permit voluntary retirement after 25 years' service.

Bills to provide for more strict regulation of dentistry and to govern the profession of podiatry were approved by the committee upon recommendation of the public health sub-committee. The fifth bill authorizes the issuance of a healing art license to Dr. A. L. Ridings.

Lane High Students To Attend Conference

Charlottesville, Va., April 15.—The student council of Lane High School has elected the following delegates to the State student council conference, to be held in Newport News April 26-27: Betty Ann Behrendt, Jack Murray, Stephen Martin, Patsy Davis and Haywood France.

Lane High also will be represented in the spelling, reading and public speaking contests at the Virginia Literary and Athletic League tournament in Lynchburg April 26. Harvey Mitchell was selected by a series of tests to compete in the spelling contest, and Holcombe Campbell will be substitute. Mary Jane Sneed and Timothy Smith will be the school's entries in the public speaking contest. Representatives in public reading have yet to be chosen.

Md. Judge Signs Order Enforcing Closed Shop

Baltimore, April 15 (AP).—An injunction order enforcing a closed shop agreement of a maritime labor group was signed today by Supreme Court Judge Eugene O'Dunne.

The action was taken in proceedings brought by the United Licensed Officers of the United States, the labor group, against the Baltimore Mail Steamship Co. and the United States Lines.

along with those in the McGehee bill.

The "committee print" of the Kennedy reorganization bill substantiated previous unconfirmed reports that the Citizens' Advisory Council had been stricken from the measure.

It also revealed that the Commissioners will be given more discretion in the selection of new department heads as language specifying that incumbents shall be retained has been stricken.

Qualifications of the administrative assistant as written into the bill are that he shall be a graduate of a college or university of recognized standing, and possess "understanding and experience in responsible supervisory positions, marked administrative ability, a thorough knowledge of the general laws of the District and the policies of administration, keen analytical ability, quick perception and appreciation of relative values, and judicial temperament."

Authority Is Limited

The revised bill carries a curb on the authority of the Commissioners to shake up the departments after enactment of the reorganization law.

While giving the District heads power to reshuffle divisions within departments, the measure carries the following restrictive proviso:

"Provided, however, that no department, board, or commission shall be created or abolished without the specific authority of Congress, except as provided by Section 210 of this title."

Section 210 authorizes the absorption of various professional licensing boards by the license department.

Purchase Authority Recalled

"To enact reasonable regulations to secure and promote the general welfare of the inhabitants of the District, by them deemed proper for the safety, health, peace, good order, comfort, convenience, and morals of the District."

The subcommittee also eliminated authority for the District to supervise the disbursements of appropriations and the purchasing of supplies by the various quasi-Federal agencies, such as the zoo, the militia, the National Capital Parks, and the U. S. engineer's office.

The bill carries a new penalty of a fine up to $500 for the violation of any section.

The final paragraph states that the law shall take effect "at such time or times as the Commissioners may designate, not to exceed, however, 90 days from the approval of this act" except for the provision abolishing the licensing boards and that creating the District civil system. These would become effective July 1, 1941.

Incumbents who are no longer protected in their jobs by reason of elimination of provisions for their retention are: The auditor, the corporation counsel, the police chief, the fire chief, the director of vehicles and traffic, the welfare director, the superintendent of insurance, and the assessor.

The subcommittee struck from the bill the Commissioners' proposal to set up a division for the recording of liens against motor vehicles in the Department of Vehicles and Traffic despite a general civic demand for the agency.

The House District Committee a week ago promised spokesmen for motorists' organizations that the proposal, which also is carried in a separate bill, would be considered by the reorganization subcommittee.

The division is opposed only by the recorder of deeds, William J. Thompkins, who asks that his office retain control of the records.

For Local Primaries

Civic leaders and spokesmen for various District organizations appeared last week before a Senate subcommittee to indorse the Capper bill calling for local primaries to elect delegates to the national political conventions. This measure should not be confused with proposals for local suffrage. But it would, as Sefton Darr pointed out, set up machinery through which residents could acquire some familiarity with the machinery of local self-government.

The more immediate and positive reason for advocacy of the Capper bill is that it would do away with the existing utterly unrepresentative method of selecting delegates. An official of the Federation of Citizens Associations declared that four years ago he was unable to find out how the people who were to represent him were going to be elected.

Thus, in addition to being disfranchised, Washingtonians are also deprived of the right exercised by party members in most of the States to select the delegates who supposedly represent them in national nominating conventions.

The Capper bill also provides for popular election of a national committeeman and committeewoman of each party. Even so small a measure of participation in the affairs of government would have a salutary effect upon local sentiment.

The bill may be too rigid in its five-year residence requirement. There is also some objection to the proposed dollar poll tax. However, funds to pay the costs of holding direct primaries would have to be provided by some general assessment of voters if the present inside method of selecting delegates were superseded, since the District budget makes no provision for defraying such costs.

Complaints are now coming to the Senate Elections Committee of "wholesale payments" of State poll taxes as a means of influencing the selection of delegates to the national conventions. Abuses of this sort can be overcome, however, without sacrificing the advantages of the regulated primaries. The charge against voters should be kept as low as possible to encourage maximum participation in the balloting.

The Visitors Industry

The Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade is appealing for funds with which to continue its activities during the next 12 months. It seeks a comparatively small sum—$72,000—to promote a very large industry, the local tourist trade. More than 6,000,000 persons are expected to visit Washington and spend at least $60,000,000 here in 1940. This huge outlay is second in importance only to Government pay rolls.

Not only local business groups but the entire population of the city benefits directly or indirectly from the inflow of tourist funds. Public-spirited citizens also have a justified pride in helping to build up an industry that has a highly educational significance as well as an amusement value for millions of Americans.

Promotional activities of the G. N. C. C. are not confined to acquainting visitors with the many attractions of Washington, although that is an important part of the campaign. A stable, flourishing tourist industry calls for adequate accommodation of visitors—a requisite in which Washington is still frequently deficient. A great deal can be done, however, to avert the discomforts of overcrowding by advance planning and fuller information as to lodging facilities available to visitors.

Publicity of the right sort can also provide protection against unreasonable exactions and enlist community cooperation to assure courteous treatment of visitors. A quarter century ago there would have been no need to stress the importance of good manners and friendly aid to inquiring strangers. But Washington was then a provincial community, lacking the cosmopolitan rush and impersonality it has since acquired. As a tourist center, it can make good use of that old-time cordiality which sometimes seems to have been forgotten in the hurry of present-day life.

Many States now make provision in their budgets for promotion of their tourist industries. For obvious reasons it does not seem fitting, nor is it at all likely that Congress would permit public funds to be used to advertise the attractions of the Nation's Capital. Hence the Board of Trade, as representative of the city's business interests, is rightly regarded as the logical organization to carry on this promotional work. By doing so it renders a community-wide service.

Buttressing Justice

The Walter-Logan bill, which is being debated in the House, has been properly singled out as one of the most important pieces of legislation pending before Congress. It would affect more than 100 Federal agencies and bureaus. More important, it would have a vital bearing upon the rights of citizens who come into controversy with those agencies.

The bill is not well understood by the public. This does not mean, however, that it has not been carefully prepared and widely discussed by lawyers and students of government. The House Judiciary Committee report approving the measure expresses doubt whether "there has been legislation proposed in a century which has had more extended and careful study than that given to this bill." It is the product of more than three years of work by a special committee of the American Bar Association and carries the indorsement of many organizations of both lawyers and laymen.

The simple purpose of the bill is to define more clearly the rights of the individual in dealing with the Government. Over a period of many decades Congress has created a varied assortment of agencies to enforce regulatory laws. In some instances it has defined the rights of citizens appearing before such authorities. But in many other instances the citizen has no clear-cut right to have his controversy with the Government properly adjudicated. The result, in the words of the House Judiciary Committee, is a "situation of indescribable confusion."

For example, there is no uniform requirement that all rules and regulations set up by governmental agencies be published. Citizens may be prosecuted for violation of rules they have never heard of and which they could not even find in print. The Walter-Logan bill would require publication of such regulations in the Federal Register before they go into effect.

Interested citizens would have an opportunity, moreover, to express their views as to what regulations would be proper and desirable. The bill would require all Federal administrative agencies to conduct public hearings before formulating their rules and regulations.

Ours is a government of laws and not of men. Yet in some instances citizens who have grievances against the Government cannot even demand a hearing. In other cases, they find it impossible to appeal their grievances to the courts for proper adjudication. It can scarcely be said that we have "equal justice under law" when the right of appeal to the courts is thus withheld in one instance and granted in another.

The Walter-Logan bill does not attempt to transfer to the courts the functions of quasi-judicial regulatory bodies or other administrative officials. It is merely a means of requiring that these agencies themselves act only within the law. That is an eminently reasonable objective. In the language of the Judiciary Committee, "the law must provide that the governors shall be governed and the regulators shall be regulated, if our present form of government is to endure."

Some provisions of the bill may be found to be unwise. But the principle on which it rests is basically sound. If civil liberties are to be respected, no governmental agency can be permitted to raise itself above the law. As Federal regulation of human relationships becomes more and more extensive, some well established means of buttressing this American concept of justice becomes imperative.

Not Created By Wishing

The seeds of Pan Americanism were first planted in the soil of this hemisphere well over a century ago. But the plant took root slowly. Many decades elapsed after Simon Bolivar's great dream was made known to the nations of the New World before they took the first effective step in the direction he advocated by establishing what is now the Pan American Union.

That occurred just 50 years ago this week. Since then the growth of the unifying concept of inter-American friendship and cooperation has been steady. And today, with the rest of the world either at war or living in the very shadow of war, the New World has reason to rejoice that it is at peace with itself and with all nations.

But if this gives the nations and peoples of the Western Hemisphere legitimate reasons for pride and satisfaction, it provides them with no occasion for complacence. As President Roosevelt pointed out in his eloquent Pan American Day address yesterday: "The cooperative peace in the Western Hemisphere was not created by wishing; and it will require more than words to maintain it." For "old dreams of universal empire are again rampant" and American nations cannot fail to take into account that "what happens in the Old World directly and powerfully affects the peace and well being of the New."

Fortunately, the dangers that threaten the New World find a hemisphere more "determined to live in peace and to make that peace secure," to quote the President's words, than ever before.

The Second Front

The landing of British troops at undisclosed points on the Norwegian coast means the creation of a new front in the war between Germany and the Allies. After more than seven months of unbroken deadlock the conflict has now been opened up, with far-reaching possibilities for both sides.

Until the arrival of the British yesterday, the only opposition with which the German occupying forces had to reckon was that provided by scattered units of the Norwegian army supplemented by hastily assembled militia. The courage and determination with which these sons of the Vikings, led by their elderly but stout-hearted monarch, have been fighting deserve the highest commendation. But unaided, however, the Norwegian forces would have a slight chance of halting the invaders. Now the odds against them are being reduced by Allied reinforcements.

It will be no easy task for the Allies to dislodge the Germans from the Norwegian centers which they have occupied. British troops may retake Narvik, indeed they may already have done so, but Oslo, where a considerable Nazi force is concentrated; Bergen, Stavanger and Trondheim may tell another story. For during the week that has elapsed since its sudden arrival in Norway the German army of occupation has been increased in size and has had time to consolidate at least some of its positions.

In other words, the fact that the British have succeeded in landing troops at certain points on the Norwegian coast does not in itself suggest the outcome of the struggle in which those troops are about to participate. But it does indicate that during these seven days the British have done much damage to German sea power as to make Allied military action in Norway feasible.

Possibly a third of the entire German destroyer fleet was smashed in the one action at Narvik alone. Germany's cruiser strength also has been seriously depleted. Of the two remaining pocket battleships one appears to have been put out of commission, and possibly sunk. Despite the continuing menace of the submarines and the airplane the way is thus open for establishment of a transport and supply route from British ports to points on the Norwegian coast.

At the very least this means that indispensable aid to the hard-pressed Norwegian troops is on the way. It also means that Germany's task in Norway has been greatly complicated. And there is the possibility—if so far only a possibility—that from a Norwegian base the Allies may ultimately be in a position to turn the German flank.

A Popular Mandate

One fact stands out clearly from the demonstration which followed the National Symphony Orchestra's "swan song" performance in Constitution Hall on Sunday. The music lovers of Washington regard the threatened breakup of the orchestra as nothing less than a tragedy.

Thousands of Washingtonians who have enjoyed the concerts of the National Symphony during the last nine years know little of the controversy between that organization's board of directors and the musicians. They are not in a position to decide where the responsibility for the present stalemate lies. They are concerned only with the serious cultural loss Washington will suffer if this dispute leads to the disintegration of the orchestra.

The demonstration inspired by Sunday's concert can be interpreted only as a sweeping demand that the orchestra be preserved. The fact that Dr. Hans Kindler was called back 16 times is ample evidence of his popularity with the Washington audience. But it was not simply a demonstration for the director. Applause reached a crescendo when Dr. Kindler shook hands with the concert master. Obviously this outburst of enthusiasm was pro-Kindler, pro-orchestra and pro-unity.

Since the Symphony Orchestra is a community project, its future ought to be decided by the community itself. So far as the audience in Constitution Hall on Sunday can speak for the community, it has given a mandate that the orchestra continue. That should lead to further negotiations between the board of directors and the Musicians' Union, and such negotiations ought to continue until a settlement is reached.

Considering the city's emphatic demand that the orchestra continue, both sides should be extremely reluctant to take the responsibility of killing it.

Probably many a case of claustrophobia is caused by trying to read the morning paper in a breakfast nook.

And if there is any news in a war communique, that's news.

Third Term

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I thought your editorials, "Third Term as a Symbol," and "Norway's Plight," in The Post of April 9, very fine.

I fully agree with you as to the warning contained in the third-term movement. To those using the argument that extraordinary circumstances may make a third term necessary, the answer is, just such circumstances should make it only more clear that we should hold to the traditions that have so far helped us through all circumstances, extraordinary or otherwise.

That our Government can stand improving is not denied, but the third-term movement is definitely not an improvement and should be looked upon with extreme disfavor by all those who wish to maintain and improve our present democratic freedom. Those who believe that their Government should support them instead of they supporting their Government will wake up one day and find that such support has become a powerful liability instead of a benefit. Wants To Pay Tax

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Twenty-one dollars and 7 cents does not seem much to be moved about. But it is—enough to drive me to ink.

That is the amount of my D. C. income tax.

When I went to the notary with my return, he asked: "You aren't going to pay this, are you?"

"There's my check," I replied.

"Hell's bulletins!" he exclaimed. "You've a voting residence in a State out West somewhere, haven't you?"

"Wisconsin," I responded.

"Then, why are you paying this?" he'd like to know. "You don't have to."

"I want to."

That is all I answered, because he would not have understood why. And maybe you won't. And maybe I don't, myself.

But my family lives here, and my work is here. And an important part of my education was acquired here when Motorcycle Cop Raymond Sinclair corrected my traffic manners at the risk of his life. Paying this helps clear my obligation to him, and to other cops, and to firemen and garbage collectors and school teachers. I like public school teachers. It makes Washington seem something, not merely imposing and official and big, but something close and dear, something that belongs to you and me together.

That's worth more than $21.07.

EDWARD J. WARD.

Against Aggression

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are in the world today two highway robbers and cutthroats, Hitler and Stalin, with despotic control over the peoples of two powerful nations.

The small nations of the world do not know who will be the next victim of aggression and murder.

Unfortunately, a great many people, including our Senators and Congressmen, excuse these acts with the cry that it is European politics. However, if some big boy in school would kill one boy, beat up two or three others almost to the point of death, while your son, who was as big as the bully, was there watching, you would, according to the above line of reasoning, pat him on the back and tell him he did right to mind his own business because the trouble was school politics.

The Government of the United States did fine in sending money to Finland to buy bread and hospital supplies but, unfortunately, with the other hand, we bought gold from Russia so that they could buy gasoline and bombs to kill and maim the Finns while Sweden, Finland's neighbor, sold the Finns down the river.

If the democratic liberties of free peoples which have been fought for since the Magna Charta down to the present time are to be preserved, I believe the democratic peoples of the world who cherish these liberties will have to work and fight together.

JOHN A. CLARK.

WPA Employes And Civil Service

To the Editor of The Post: Sir—In your editorial of April 13, indorsing the Ramspeck bill to extend civil service, you rightly criticize the provision barring civil service benefits to employes hailing from States which have more than their quota of civil service employment. You fail to mention another and even more arbitrary provision, which bars some 30,000 administrative employes of the Work Projects Administration from the benefits of the bill.

The provision regarding State quotas has a theory—even though it is a bad theory—behind it. The prohibition against putting WPA employes under civil service was that it was improper to put an emergency agency under civil service laws. But the present bill itself refutes that argument; it covers in a number of emergency agencies—in fact, all except WPA.

Everyone familiar with the civil service laws knows that there is no connection between civil service and agency permanence. It is simply not true that to put WPA employes under civil service would thereby perpetuate the WPA. It would merely insure that as long as the WPA exists its workers would receive the same treatment which civil service provides for Government employes in other agencies.

Civil service benefits the Government worker and the public. It protects the worker against arbitrary dismissal, and in the event his particular job is terminated it allows him to transfer to a similar job when a vacancy occurs. It also allows the worker to contribute part of his salary in a system of old age retirement. These elementary protections enable the civil service employe to do better work and safeguard the public service from the dangers of political manipulation and political favoritism.

WPA administrative employes have a record of faithful and efficient service extending over the last five years. The magazine Fortune wrote of the WPA administration that it "functions with an efficiency of which any industrialist would be proud." A Gallup poll on the question showed the public both Democrats and Republicans, to be overwhelmingly in favor of putting WPA under civil service.

On the basis of their record, WPA employes have a right to ask that the discriminatory provision in the Ramspeck bill (which was put in against the sponsor's own desires) be removed, and that they be given the opportunity to serve the public better under civil service.

Church Unity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although a little late, may I also congratulate those who made up The Post's "Our Town in Pictures" sections for the past three weeks, featuring Washington's churches?

Two phases particularly interested me: the growing cooperation and similarity of the churches, and the emphasis placed on youth work. I was glad that ample space was given to Christian Endeavor, the youth movement that is doing much to bring the churches closer together.

I noted the statement, "Most of the local churches have young people's organizations, usually spoken of as Christian Endeavors—although there is some variation in names used by the different denominations."

May I suggest that if these young people's organization with "some variation of names" were to join the fellowship of Christian Endeavor, it would be a natural step toward church unity. Such a step might point out some dangers of organic Protestant union, but it is my belief that it would rather show such benefits that the churches would soon forget their differences in their common bond of love."

For Jennings Randolph

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was quite pleased to see in your paper of April 10 that Congressman Jennings Randolph, of W. Va., (Washington's Unofficial Mayor) is seeking reelection.

Being a suburbanite of Washington I have read quite a bit about the activities of this favorite son of the "mountain State." Too bad he isn't a native Washingtonian as our great city needs more men of his caliber in responsible civic positions. However, our loss is another's gain!

He has done a wonderful job toward improving conditions for Washington's voteless half million people. And, if a Congressman does this for people he doesn't even know, he certainly must do an awfully good job for his constituents back home.

I dare say the people of his district fully appreciate just how fortunate they are in having such a man to represent them in the U. S. Congress! He is just the right age and has had enough experience to really do a good job and, I predict that within a few short years he will really be an outstanding statesman!

"This Sleep of Death"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fear and uneasiness prevent anybody from falling asleep readily. But America, having unbounded trust in its isolation, fears little and sleeps profoundly.

Let us not be surprised, therefore, if democracy in America dies in its sleep. Once the Nazi-Fascist-Communist combine wins all the world save America, no war with America may be necessary in order to shackle her with totalitarian slavery.

A world embargo against us, combined with colossal subsidies for un-American activities, including strikes and race riots and troubles unforeseen, can wear down the very soul of even democracy in America. The heat that can be turned on us by the Old World, once it becomes totally totalitarian, can become so intense that war itself can add little to it.

Indeed, we may come to wish the struggle were an open, genuine war. And we may easily find ourselves, in a few years, gnashing our teeth that "selfish" Britain and France are no longer living democracies to struggle alongside us in behalf of the things for which all democracies stand.

The Post Impressionist

A Taste Of Sky

There is one class of people to whom my heart goes out in unutterable pity. It is those unfortunates who never knew the unadulterated joys of life derived from the sugar-maple (Acer saccharum) surely one of the trees in the grove of fame.

Especially does this compassion of mine flow at about this time of year, or a little earlier, when throughout the hardwood country of our Northeastern States and of southern Canada winter still lingers stubbornly in the lap of spring, when the nights are still freezing cold and the days are warm and thawy. For it is then that the sweet maple sap flows for the garnering, and for him who owns a sugar bush it is time to get out his auger and sap buckets and iron spouts and to begin tapping.

South of latitude 39 degrees there is a sort of blackout of maple consciousness. Stop the average man on the streets of Washington and ask him what a sugar snow is. Ask him if he has ever eaten wax-on-snow. At the threat of a 20-volume encyclopedia he couldn't tell you. He would only look at you suspiciously and refer you probably to the Department of Agriculture.

It has been 25 years or so since I was in a sugar bush going full blast, but one is not apt to forget such an experience in a whole lifetime. Mine was in one of the buxom maple groves of Chautauqua County, N. Y. It was a wonderfully busy time when the sap was running at its height.

The fire under the big evaporator had to be kept going all night in order to keep ahead. To stay up in the spring woods all night and help tend the fire, to watch the thin steaming fluid turn slowly into a golden nectar, and in the morning to draw off the pure, rich syrup all ready for innumerable pancakes—that was something.

Perhaps it was still so cold that the sap froze solid in the spouts during the night. But as soon as the sun began to get warm and high, the drip, drip, drip into the tin buckets would begin, and by noon every spout (sometimes two or three to a tree) would be yielding about 70 drops a minute, and the bleak woods (for there must not yet be any buds) would sparkle with shining metal and with the translucent drops of sap catching and scattering the sunlight.

Bobsleds were easiest to use in gathering up the sap, and so a sugar snow was always hoped for. The other day in the Christian Science Monitor, Frances Frost invoked a sugar snow that will not melt from my mind in a hurry:

The sugar snow, the soft and light,
Falls now upon the edge of night.
The great flakes slant among the trees;
And orchards bend their crooked knees
Into the drifts, lean elbows on Old fences. Where the gate is down,
Our hob-nailed boots have set their track
Up to the maple wood and back;
And home again, our voices cry
Of maple sap that tastes of sky.

If, as another poet has suggested, you would like to get some idea of what the Greeks were dreaming about in their ambrosia, you will have to search no farther than a gallon of fresh maple syrup. You can go farther, however. You can "sugar it off," as they say—that is, boil it down still more, into maple sugar. If you stir or beat it while it is crystallizing, it will turn out bleached and creamy and fine in texture and possessing an inimitable flavor.

But if you really want something, bring in a panful of good, clean snow, and while the boiled-down syrup is still piping hot, pour it over the snow. It will harden into a golden, wax-like, super-plus confection known as wax-on-snow. You eat it with a fork, and may the best man win! Let me warn you, however—wax-on-snow is no weak man's dish, and your teeth had better be well-nigh impeccable.

The Indians knew a thing or two, and they knew the wonders of the sugar maple long before the white man invaded America. In New York City, at the American Museum of Natural History, may be seen a full-size model of an Indian sugar camp of about the time of Columbus. True, their syrup was probably pretty thin, but it was sweet and with the genuine maple flavor, not synthetic.

It is related that one Jesuit missionary made a mistake and baptized a sick Indian with some of the Indians' maple syrup. "Fortunately," he explains, "I was able to secure water and perform the ceremony over again before the patient died."

There is still a lot of maple syrup and sugar made, but production is dwindling. In 1934 it was 4,250,000 pounds. In 1929 it was three times that much. The hurricane in New England two years ago ruined hundreds of sugar bushes, but Vermont is still the maple State. In western New York many groves are being cut down for wood and timber. In Ohio and as far South as Somerset County, Pa., a good number of trees are still tapped.

The maple will probably always yield its delectable sweets to good Americans, but if during my lifetime there should be any danger of my not being able to procure my annual allotment of maple syrup, I hope some kind missionary will baptize me with a not too viscid concentration of maple sap and dispatch me to the happy hunting grounds.

The State Vs. Man

The Walter-Logan Bill

THE HOUSE this week is debating the Walter-Logan bill. To try to explain this measure is to encounter one of the most frequent bedevilments that beset every writer of news from Washington. The bill contains some 4,000 words—and this dispatch is limited to some 800. Even if there were space enough to print the bill in full, its necessarily technical, legal phraseology would not be easily understood.

Yet the bill ought to be understood. It goes to the heart of what is troubling the country and the world—the conflict between the rights of man, and the authority of government. It aims to protect the citizen against arbitrary power exercised by agents of government. It aims to save America from being brought under the type of government that has spread over Europe during the past 20 years. The purpose of the bill was stated by one of its original authors, recently deceased Democratic Senator Logan, of Kentucky:

"To stem and, if possible, to reverse the drift . . . which, if it should succeed in any substantial degree in this country, could but result in totalitarianism."

Let us be clear about just what the Walter-Logan bill attempts—and does not attempt. It does not attempt to limit the scope of government. It does not attempt to reduce the authority of agents of government. The Walter-Logan bill attempts only to provide this: That wherever an agency of government attempts to exercise power over a citizen, wherever it lays hands on the citizen's person or property—in every such case the citizen shall have an appeal to a court, a judicial body. That is the same as saying, and no more than saying, that every man shall be entitled to his day in court.

THE BILL has to do with departments of government, executive bureaus, such as Triple A, the Labor Board, scores of others. These agencies are created by Congress. Congress, in creating an agency, gives it certain limited power to make regulations—because Congress cannot provide in advance for every situation that will arise. Congress can only confer the powers in broad terms, and authorize the agency to make regulations. The regulations must—or ought to—be confined strictly within the limits of the power conferred by Congress.

But the Government agencies sometimes do not keep within the limits set by Congress. Sometimes they interpret their authority from Congress as authority to do whatever they deem desirable. When Congress wrote the census law it authorized only a limited scope of questions. But the Census Bureau wrote additional questions—and was indignant when any one challenged those questions.

So Congress sets up the agencies. The agencies thereupon write regulations, thousands of regulations, which citizens are required to obey. And under the regulations, employes of the agencies issue orders, tens of thousands of orders, each requiring a citizen to do a certain thing, or refrain from doing another thing. A farmer (in many situations) must plant what the agent of AAA tells him to plant, and only as many acres as the agent decrees. Again, just recently, a corporation is ready to put television sets on the market—but FCC forbids. There are hundreds of such orders every day. Often the orders are issued by minor employes of the agencies, distant from Washington. Often the orders and regulations are accompanied by penalties. The citizen must obey, or run risk. A citizen must answer the questions asked by a census taker, or be subject to fine or imprisonment—even though the legality of some questions, the very constitutionality of them, is seriously doubted.

NOW, WHAT the Walter-Logan Act provides is merely that every order, every regulation, issued by an executive agency, shall be subject to appeal to a judicial body, a court. To put it the other way, if a citizen affected by an order or regulation wishes to appeal to a court, he shall have the right, and there shall be an appropriate court to which he can go.

It must be a true court, a truly judicial body. That is, the judicial body must be impartial, disinterested. It must be a court in which the Government official and the citizen stand exactly equal. This is elementary, but has come to be violated in practice.

Some Government agencies say, in effect, "We are a court ourselves." They say, "if the citizen feels an order or regulation does him injustice, we will give him a hearing." Such a hearing, by the same body that issued the order, is like saying to the citizen, "Before we compel you to do what we order, we will let you talk if you want to." It is a case of the same body acting as both prosecutor and judge.

And that is contrary to the oldest and most fundamental conception of justice. As often put, no man may be a judge in his own case. And what the Walter-Logan bill proposes is that no Government agency shall be a judge in its own case. It proposes to set up a court outside the agency, an independent court, a court which has no more interest in the Government official than in the citizen.

The Administration resists the Walter-Logan bill. After it had been indorsed by the Judiciary Committees of both House and Senate; after it had been actually passed by the Senate without a dissenting vote, the Administration has held it up nearly a year. The reason? Senator Logan answered:

"The sole issue here presented to Congress is whether we shall have a government by men or a government by law. There are persons connected with the present Administration who believe it ought to be a government by men—so they are rabidly opposed to this bill."

CONGRESSMAN WALTER
The bill which bears his name together with that of the late Senator Logan, of Kentucky, is discussed in an article on this page by Mark Sullivan

Vacationing In Florida

NOW, WAITER, let's see if we can get this straight. We want one, two Scotch old-fashioned, and one, two rum Collinses and one, two dry Martinis, one straight bourbon and two Scotch and water, and bring the luncheon menu, please.

Oh, it's good to be back in town. Sisters, I'm telling you. I can't stand many more of those Florida vacations. It isn't only the helling-around like mad all the time, up till all hours of the night and golf in the morning, but running a house is getting to be a pain in the neck. We opened the place just before Christmas, and the servants I had through that house in a little over four months reminded me of the League of Nations. That nice little Austrian couple didn't last till New Year's till I discovered she was pregnant and the man put up an awful row about wanting Pullman space back to New York. Henry and I talked it over, and we just decided to put our foot down, because if everybody spoils them pretty soon it will be impossible to get any kind of help. Henry said, after all she was a woman and it was a hard ride all the way back, sitting up in the day coach, but I was firm, because, after all, it wasn't any of our doing, although she was a cute little trick, and I might question Henry a little further on that. Anyway, we shoved them out and then that maid that Harriet gave me when she went to Reno scorched one of my very best nighties with the iron, so, on the next payday I just took $40 out of her pay to teach her a lesson. That led to another row, and out she went. Then the next pair we had were English, and when I got the bills the first of February you would have thought we were running a colony restaurant just for the help.

TWICE SHE GAVE the whole staff chicken, and any number of times chops and steaks, and I guess they must have been greasing the cars with the best butter.

You know I really am an economical housekeeper, and it drives me wild to see extravagance in the kitchen. So, out they went, and a couple of French numbers took over, and what do you think the man pulled on us after a few days? He said the servants ought to have a union, because the employers, like us, were all ganged together and wouldn't hire a servant away from a neighbor. I said I should say I wouldn't steal anybody's servant away, and the man said if a couple did good work they ought to have a chance to get a better job. He said if Henry, for instance, won a big case for a client the client couldn't keep him on at the same wages forever, because other clients would hire him for more money. I said we just wouldn't go into that.

I had rotten luck at Bradley's all season, too. I won $1,100 the first night and $840 the next time, but never could get off the ground again. Henry stopped me at $10,000 because times aren't so good, but I had a little money, and that went, too, and one night we were a little tight at a party on the Spelvin's yacht, and my beautiful diamond bracelet went overboard. I was so mad I could spit. Henry says God knows when I can have another, because we simply have to economize and it wasn't insured that way.

WHAT ARE WE going to eat, girls? I'm dieting again, but don't mind me, but it gives me a pain, all the hollering about people starving when the fact is I never really eat much. Just a few drinks and a salad and I am beginning to think alcohol is really food.

There were some really lovely parties this year, though. The Swivets had 80 at their Valentine's party, and the wine up to your hips, and it must have cost God knows how much; but he should worry, with his aluminum mines, although he says labor unions are about to ruin him. He says they want $5 a day just for ordinary workers, and lazy and scrawny and shiftless, too, and the union beats them up and won't let them work for $2 a day to support their families. He says Westbrook Pegler is doing the greatest work in America today, exposing the unions, because otherwise we will surely have communism.

Waiter, will you please do this all again? That's two old-fashioned, two rum Collinses, and—but you have it written down. Meantime, we will decide what we want for lunch, although I am up 6 pounds, and just hate the sight of food. I wish somebody would starve me and see if I care.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On The General Shape Of The War

WE ARE witnessing the second phase of the gigantic struggle which began in the East, has now spread to the North, and is surely destined to spread to the West and the Southeast.

When Hitler came to power, Germany was entirely surrounded, except at one point, by small nations. France was the one great power with which Germany had a common frontier; that frontier is impassable on the Rhine, and beyond the Rhine Germany and France were separated by the demilitarization of the German territory on the left bank of the Rhine. No other great power was in military contact with Germany; the neighbors of Germany were Holland, Belgium, Luxemburg, Switzerland, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Lithuania and Denmark.

As long as this circle of small states was maintained, it was practically impossible to fight a great European war. There was no battlefield. It has followed that as Hitler has destroyed his small neighbors, he has created battlefields. His conquests have meant that he has been removing the buffers between Germany and the Great Powers of Europe. The Austrian conquest brought him into contact with Italy; the Polish conquest brought him into contact with Russia; the invasion of Scandinavia has brought him into contact with Great Britain; the invasion of Holland and Belgium will bring him into contact with France; an invasion of the Balkans will bring him into contact with Russia, Italy, Turkey, Great Britain and France. Thus the more he expands, the greater are the forces with which he must deal.

ALTHOUGH Hitler foresaw that he could not expand without a struggle his plan was to manage the thing in such a way that he could deal separately with each of his potential opponents. He intended to destroy them on the installment plan, as he had destroyed Austria and then Czecho-Slovakia. His nightmare has always been that he might have to face a coalition of the Great Powers of Europe, and his cries of rage against Britain reflect his fear that once again, as in the case of Napoleon Bonaparte, Great Britain will organize Europe to suppress an attempt at the domination of Europe. The fact that Hitler has opened up a Northern Front means that he realizes that the strategical plan of the Allies, which is to organize Europe against him, will be successful unless he can somehow strike a fatal blow at the heart of the Anglo-French power.

For nothing is more certain, amidst all the risks and uncertainties of the battles which have begun, than that the six months' pause has ended because the Allies have compelled Hitler to come out and fight. Although Hitler has the tactical and local initiative in the sense that he has been able to choose Scandinavia rather than the Low Countries or the Balkans for the first battlefield, it is the Allies who are dictating the grand strategy of the war.

From the very beginning they have conceived the war as a siege in which all of Europe would eventually participate, and they have organized their prodigious efforts on the theory that the siege would compel Hitler to fight his way out, and to become exhausted and to be defeated in the attempt. Since the failure of the policy of appeasement, the Allies have never altered their fundamental conception of how the war might be prevented, and how, if it came, it would have to be won. Their plan is to organize Europe against the Nazis. Hitler has several times altered his conception of the war. The fact that the Allies have thus far imposed their strategical intentions upon Hitler is objective evidence, far more reliable than the words of statesmen or the impressions of observers, that thus far, and until Hitler can win sensational victories, the Allies occupy the superior position and possess the superior force.

For it is the weaker side which must vacillate and must improvise; to be the stronger is to be able to fix the conditions in which a war is to be decided and to compel the enemy to submit to them. It is thus of vital importance to know whether it is in fact true that the Allies, not Hitler, are imposing their strategical plans upon the conduct of the war.

Now, there is no substantial doubt—in fact, the Nazi leaders and propagandists admit it—that since August, 1939, Hitler has several times revised his fundamental conception of the war. His first plan, obviously, was to avoid war altogether for the present and to destroy Poland, as he had destroyed Czecho-Slovakia, by another Munich. That plan failed when the Poles decided to fight. His second plan was to localize the Polish war by intimidating the Allies into abandoning their guaranty to Poland. This was the primary purpose of the Russian treaty. The threat did not work.

The third plan was to conquer Poland quickly, and then to make peace with the Allies. This plan was not only a mistake; it was a stupendous blunder. It gave the Allies time to mobilize thoroughly; for their mobilization requires at least three weeks. Once the war had begun, there was, therefore, never the slightest possibility that the Allies would make peace and demobilize while Hitler's war machine was intact. For if the Allies had accepted the peace which Hitler offered them in October, demobilization would have been the equivalent of military suicide. At any time thereafter they would have been open to a Western Blitzkrieg, having no Polish ally to hold up the Germans for the short, but absolutely vital, three weeks which they would have needed in order to mobilize again.

HITLER'S fourth plan was to fight a very inexpensive war against Great Britain, using submarines, magnetic mines and a few airplanes—but to leave France alone—to conserve his stocks of raw materials, to loot the conquered territory, to enslave the inhabitants and to organize the Russian production. He believed in the decadence of the democracies. He hoped that he could tire out the Allies and that he could demoralize their fighting spirit, that he could divide them by propaganda, could undermine them by subversive conspiracy (using the Communists to corrupt the working classes and the defeatists to corrupt the rich); he hoped that either he could wangle a truce or that he could provoke the Allies to rash and foolish adventures.

This plan was explored thoroughly during the winter. The plan failed because it was a fantasy. The Nazis realized, approximately about the time of the Sumner Welles mission to Europe, that the Russian production cannot be organized to serve Germany's war needs. The task is technically impossible in any reasonable length of time and, moreover, the Russians have made it clear enough that they will passively resist such an undertaking. Second, the Allies were restrained partly by good sense, and partly by good luck, from involving themselves in a disastrous and useless war with Russia. Third, the free peoples are not decadent. There were changes in the cabinets in London and Paris which brought to greater influence men who were determined not to sit and wait while Hitler decided how it would suit him to fight the war.

SO THE ALLIES tightened the blockade. They meant to compel Hitler to do what the fundamental strategy of the Allies has always required him to do—namely to suffocate, or to come out from behind the protection afforded by the surrounding neutrals, and to let his main forces become directly engaged with the Allied forces. Plainly, this is not what Hitler wished to do. It is evident that he did not choose to make the offensive in the West. Had he really wished to make the offensive because he was confident of success, he would have done so before he attacked Poland, or, at least, he would have done so in the autumn when the Allied and neutral defenses were much less formidable than they are today.

No doubt the Allies would have been glad of a few months delay to improve their armaments still further; they would then have been able to deliver an even more effective counter-attack than may be possible for some time to come. But this is in itself additional evidence to support the conclusion that Hitler's decision to attack in the west has been dictated, not by confidence in his own power, but by fear of the mounting power of his enemies—that he is moved by necessity, and not by his preferences and convictions.

ALLIED STRATEGY has from the outset been determined by two controlling considerations. The first, which is now generally understood, is that the blockade, however severe, can undermine the military power of Germany only if Germany is compelled to use up her stocks of raw materials faster than they can be replenished by looting the small countries and by imports through the holes in the blockade. The Allies can get the maximum result from the blockade only if the fighting becomes intense and the rate of consumption becomes very fast. Therefore, regardless of the local and tactical result of the fighting, provided, of course, the Germans do not deliver a knockout blow, the blockade is a decisive weapon when Germany is compelled to fight a large scale action which lasts until her economic weakness becomes a critical factor.

But this is not the only reason why the Allied strategy has always been, and is now, to compel Hitler to fight. The Allies understand that they must engage in battle the force with which Hitler has terrorized the whole of Europe. For only by taking this risk can they raise up against Hitler that coalition of the powers of Europe which will eventually destroy him. The Allies can create the coalition only by supreme courage and tremendous sacrifice. But with courage they will create it. For the plain fact about Europe today is that every people in Europe, a large part of the German people included, is a potential ally of the Allies. There are no important exceptions. Though there are Nazi agents and sympathizers planted about Europe, there is no people which does not dread a Nazi victory, none which does not need Hitler's eventual downfall. What has happened in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Denmark and Norway, and may happen tomorrow in Holland, Belgium, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Rumania, has created a state of mind throughout Europe in which a fierce antipathy is held in check by a tremendous fear.

HITLER KNOWS this. The Allies know it. If Hitler can destroy the Allied power, Europe will submit to his domination and other adventurers will participate in the looting which will follow the world-wide anarchy. But if Hitler cannot destroy the Allies, then the Allies will, by liberating the peoples of Europe from their terror, rally to their banner a coalition of Europe. The outcome is no longer dependent on propaganda, but on a military decision. The hopes of Europe are with the Allies. The fears of Europe are fixed upon the striking power of the German military machine. Remove that fear and all of Europe will take part in the victory over Hitler.

But that fear cannot be removed until the peoples of Europe see, and are sure that they have seen, the Allies draw into battle and engage totally the armed power which Hitler wields. In this sense it is literally true that the British and French are fighting not only for themselves, but for all the peoples of Europe. For only when the intimidated peoples see Hitler's engines of aggression fixed on some battlefield, being burned up and used beyond the possibilities of their quick renewal, will the great fear subside. Then, and only then, will the coalition that now exists in the hearts of the peoples emerge as a practical instrument of their liberation.

The Allies have allies everywhere. But for the help of those allies they must pay a heavy price. They must risk everything. The price they have to pay is the cost of drawing down upon themselves and, therefore, drawing away from the other peoples, the thunderbolts that Hitler can launch. Then the terrified peoples of Europe will once again call their souls their own and be able to do what their vital interests and their profoundest sentiments will cause them to do.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Reunion.

(Louis Feustel, trainer for Glen Riddle Farm, who developed Man o' War, has returned to the farm as trainer after many years' absence with other stables—News item.)

They're back once more together,
They're there beside the shed:
Two pals for too long parted—
Lou Feustel and "Big Red."

Agrazin' in the pasture
"Red" flashed his old time pep—
He raised his head and whinned—
He'd heard an old-time step!

His ears went quickly forward,
His eyes became agleam
As all the old-time glories
No longer seemed a dream.

"Big Red" stood like a statue,
As startled horses do,
Then trotted to the gateway
As if to say, "It's Lou!"

The trainer looked and nodded
Through misty eyes and said,
With half a sob, "Hello there . . .
I knew you'd know me, Red."

The horse nosed Louis' shoulder
And "nozzled" at his hand;
The trainer stroked so gently
His regal head so grand.

Then all the years went rolling
And shadows fell away . . .
A horse and man were winning
The heats of yesteryear!

The Preakness and the Belmont—
Futurities and all . . .
The "red hoss" out there winging
With none to overhaul.

They're back now in the twenties
The toasts now ring again . . .
For horse of song and fable
And man who "knew him when!"

What memories surge forward
To crowd a touching scene . . .
The wreaths, the bands, the cheering
The thrill of contests keen!!

They look upon each other,
Their hearts and minds aglow,
Enjoying that communion
The reunited know.

The unions are tossing monkey wrenches into the New York World's Fair once more. How about building a vast arena there, to be called the Combat Area? With nonstop engagements between the workers and the fair officials?

Mexican Reaction

By Betty Kirk

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Mexico City.

DELIVERY of the United States note to Mexico, requesting arbitration of the oil question, has had the political effect in Mexico of turning the clock back a year. Appearance of the United States Government for the first time officially in the controversy has raised the old cry of "intervention" and "foreign imperialism," so hated throughout Latin America, and solidified the nation fervently behind President Lazaro Cardenas as the saviour and defender of the national sovereignty.

The threat of outside pressure has not only restored Cardenas to unquestioned national leadership but pulled him out of a serious jam with the Oil Workers Union which was rebelling against his reorganization plan for the industry.

The timing of the note could not have been more perfect, so far as Mexico's internal affairs go, nor more advantageous to the present administration. While the present fanfare of patriotism and rallying to the support of Gen. Cardenas will undoubtedly subside by the time the elections come off on July 7 the issue will be kept alive by the government during these three months in order to insure the desired result at the polls. If the exchange of notes between the United States and Mexico on the issue is lengthy each note sent or received will give the Cardenas administration opportunity for reviving the cry of intervention.

PRESIDENT CARDENAS was in a tight spot with the Oil Workers Union immediately before delivery of the note. He had dictated a reorganization of the industry which would curb union power, purge its abuses and increase government control. Labor received this threatened curb in a nasty humor. Although no official reply had yet been given inside sources said that not only would labor reject the presidential plan but that it would do so with malicious and pointed reminders to the President of his repeated guarantees to the Oil Workers Union and the labor cause.

Delivery of the note, requesting arbitration, reversed the situation. No longer could labor oppose any plan presented for stabilizing the industry when not only the industry but the "national sovereignty" with it were threatened by the "foreign imperialists" which labor so dearly loves to attack. Resistance now would be unpatriotic and bets are two to one that the union will swallow the reorganization plan, with perhaps some minor revisions, in order to demonstrate its solidarity with the government.

Three months before the elections, and before the delivery of the note, the candidacy of Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho had become largely independent of Cardenas control and was sailing along under its own steam. It was taking a more conservative trend than Cardenas himself upholds and giving confidential guarantees to many groups of reforms to be implanted when Gen. Avila Camacho succeeded to the presidency. The strongest stand of the Avila Camacho group was its political divorce from Lombardo Toledano and the Confederation of Mexican Labor, which Cardenas has supported for the past five years.

Any chance for a break with Cardenas policies was, however, checked when Washington's move aroused the national patriotism and recreated Gen. Cardenas as the undisputed man of the hour. The best that the Avila Camachistas can do now is to return to the Cardenas fold and take orders from the President, at least until the elections are over.

GEN. JUAN ANDREAU ALMAZAN has been maneuvered into an even worse position. His campaign was going along swimmingly and his strength admitted and feared by both government and Avila Camacho's forces, until the arbitration note came along. Then the often repeated accusations made by the Avila Camachistas, that Almazan was too friendly to foreign capital and business, were hastily revived and a direct challenge made to him to get in line on the oil question and support the government or be branded as a traitor.

THE ALMAZAN campaign is based upon criticism of the Cardenas government. The United States note has demolished his "bandera." The only play he can possibly make now is to remain silent. And presidential campaigns are not won by mutes.

The biggest reversal of all, however, comes in the case of Lombardo Toledano. The labor leader and his cause have been increasingly unpopular in the past six months. Now they are jumped over night into leadership of a crusade against foreign intervention and defense of the national honor. The demonstration of solidarity with the government, called for April 11, was led by labor, which once again assumes a hero's role and proves its patriotism.

This wholesale political transformation in effect turned the clock back a year to the time when President Cardenas and Lombardo Toledano were the undisputed national leaders and Generals Almazan and Avila Camacho could not yet challenge their authority. Moreover it occurred before the contents of the note were known or the nature of Mexico's reply. It forcefully illustrated the high tension existing here when any outside force threatens intervention in Mexican affairs. And it shows the swift development of a national political consciousness as opposed to the public apathy formerly prevailing with regard to national affairs.

The philosophy of the expropriation, as expressed by President Cardenas at the opening of the congress last September 1, gives an inkling as to what Mexico's answer to the arbitration suggestion may be. Said the Mexican President:

"The expropriation is bound up in the history of our economic independence and it must not be touched. Its motive for being is clearly rooted in the heart of the people, who consider it as a legitimate recovery of the nation's rights to the sub-soil wealth . . . However large the petroleum interests may be, the interests of continental harmony are more important, especially at a difficult time like the present when states and nations with democratic spirits should maintain a united front. To sacrifice this urgent duty to private interests would be a mistake for the destinies of America, a crime against the sovereign rights of the country."

CHANGES which the last decade has brought in the downtown section looking northwestward from Washington Monument are depicted in these "today and yesterday" photographs. The latter shows what a tourist here for Herbert Hoover's inauguration would have seen looking from the monument toward Georgetown; the former, what he'll see today, now that he is back for cherry blossom time.

Five of the six wartime temporary buildings were demolished to make way for the Federal Reserve and Interior Department Buildings and to provide the two triangular shaped parks, all shown in "today's" picture. The heating plant, White House garage and hastily constructed office buildings erected during the World War have given way to marble, limestone and greensward.

You will identify, in the modern picture, the Federal Reserve (A) and Public Health Service (B) buildings, on the left; the six-wing Interior (C) and Pan American Union (D) buildings on the right. The debris-filled open space (E), left center, foreground, is where the Boulevard Apartments, dynamited recently to provide a site for the new War Department building, formerly stood.

Following is the key to the picture made approximately 12 years ago: (1) Washington General Depot and chunk of the Internal Revenue Bureau; (2) a war-time research building long since leveled; (3) the old White House garage; (4) heating plant that served the group of temporary buildings; (5) Quartermasters Corps garage, still standing; (6) building which housed parts of the War and Justice Departments; (7) "melting pot" for various units of the ICC, General Accounting Office, Personnel Classification Board and other bureaus; (8) part of the Interstate Commerce Commission; (9) Washington Headquarters Company; (10) east portion of the Riverside Apartments; (11) old Mayfair Apartments; (12) former Potomac Park apartments; (13) Boulevard Apartments, now razed; (14) Corcoran Courts apartment house; (15) Briggs School; (16) Interior Department garage; (17) site of temporary Federal Trade Commission building which burned down in the early 30's. Silk Lingerie Blouse Versus Tailored Classic

It's still a matter of whether your tastes lie along traditional lines or eternally feminine ones this spring—and this choice extends even to your shirt tails. The true lover of the classics will welcome the pure dye crepe shirt, below, made of Trubu silk. It is hand-fashioned with the simplest of tie front collars and hand cross stitching down the front panels

Feminine types will welcome the guile that goes with the sheer lingerie blouse, above, decorative with spring tailleurs, yet not too fussy. This white triple sheer silk blouse is lace-trimmed about the little turned-down collar, with vertical pin tucks harmonizing with the front inserts of lace. One of those graceful little blouses to be worn in or out of your skirt

DeGoofey versus Wadd

A CLUB election row that threatens to overshadow the national Presidential contest has developed in the Do Something About It League.

Mrs. DeGoofey

Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, nationally known crusader, admitted yesterday at her press conference that she was being opposed for the presidency of the league she founded two years ago by Mrs. Marmaduke Wadd, widow of the nut cup magnate. She declared a "disgruntled faction of the club" was backing the candidacy of Mrs. Wadd, who is honorary chairman of the league's pageant committee.

"There is a certain clique of socialites in the league," said Mrs. DeGoofey, "that has steadily opposed my efforts to reform the large tea and buffet supper. You see, the vested interests want these functions retained at all costs because they afford the easiest means for wealthy hostesses to repay their social obligations. But as far as I am concerned, I will continue on the side of the underdog guest—even if it costs me my office."

Socialite Chisels In on Reform

"Who is this Mrs. Wadd?" asked the editor of a genealogical column.

"Now, I wouldn't want you to to print this," replied Mrs. DeGoofey, "but confidentially, she is a wealthy upstart who is trying to crash Washington society. She tried to work her way up through the charities and failed, so now she has turned to reform. Reform! What does she know about reform? Who—or rather whom—has she ever reformed?

"I tell you it is merely an attempt of the society interests to get control of the Do Something About It League. They want to stop my campaign against watercress sandwiches and ooey canapes; against rude and snooty waiters at mass dinners, who grab your plate out from under you before you have finished; against the giving of limousines right of way over taxicabs in front of theaters; against this absurd system of ranking guests according to official standing; against the June wedding present holdup; against—well against all the high-handed social practices that work to their advantage."

MRS. WADD

Promise No Aid To Hoi Polloi

"Does the Wadd faction openly oppose you on such anti-proletarian grounds, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a representative of the Economic Review.

"Not exactly. But they say I am a 'little too radical.' Now, I ask you—where would the world be today without radicals? Without such women as Joan of Arc and myself? No, the only trouble is that I am too far ahead of my time.

"Another thing, what would happen to the Do Something About It League if Mrs. Marmaduke Wadd and her clique got in? Do you think any of them would go into street cars and buses and make seat hogs move over? Would any of them rise up at banquets and shout 'Boo' at long-winded orators? Would any of them thumb their noses at limousine drivers who try to run over pedestrians? No indeed! If they were in control, the Do Something About It League would degenerate into just another tea giving, minute reading club."

"What campaign steps are being taken by the opposing faction, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a returned war correspondent.

"Well, I understand the other side is telephoning night and day and making all sorts of promises. Mrs. Wadd is also giving teas and luncheons and entertaining left and right. There is also a whispering campaign going on.

No Campaigning To Speak Of

"However, I will not stoop to any such tactics. I stand squarely on my record as a reformer. Of course, since my friends urge it I may hold a few rallies and make a few speeches. I am also getting out some pamphlets listing my achievements in the field of reform. In addition, I am mailing out mimeographed letters to league members explaining clearly the issues at stake.

"My campaign managers, Dr. Lucretia Spellmaster and Prof. Byron Bysshe Aspic, only man member of the league, also are making a drive to round up all inactive members and offer them honorary chairmanships on committees, in event I am elected. In addition, I am holding open house daily from 4 to 5 at the league's headquarters to get better acquainted with the rank and file of the organization. But aside from these small efforts, I am standing solely on my own integrity. For I have always maintained that the office should seek the woman."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Sun tan worked in reverse sometimes last winter. There was Virginia Ryan, one of our fashion artists. She decided on ski-running instead of beach-sunning for her holiday, so she went to Canada. When she came back she was a mahogany brown, the envy of her pals, and some of the girls who went South returned as pale as nightclub loafers.

North or South—you never know . . . Mr. Jack Rockefeller's famous outdoor skating rink right on Fifth avenue is being turned into a roller rink for the warm months. They say they have a specially made silent skate so that office workers in the centers won't be disturbed by the roar below. Ten professionals will be on hand to teach beginners.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Group Leader in Her Neighborhood When Child, Girl Hasn't a Bosom Friend, at 15; What's Wrong?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A few years ago, I was the most popular girl in our neighborhood. All the girls gathered at my house and we always had fun together. But now that we're older (I'm 15), everything has changed. I honestly don't have one real girl friend in my neighborhood. Of three girls with whom I used to associate, one (who is 16) thinks I'm too young for her now; another goes with a different and not-very-nice crowd, and the third told somebody that she "resents" me (whatever that means).

None of the girls at school ever ask me to go any place with them, although they are awfully nice in class. I asked my mother about it and she said that maybe—because I had the "lead" in our last two class plays and am popular with boys—the girls think I am busy enough. As for the plays, they were over last month. And as for boys, I haven't had a date since New Year's Eve, because I'll have plenty of time for dates later in life and I can have more fun with girls, anyway.

I'd give anything to have a girl friend. I'm so lonely and despondent that I'm getting nervous. Is there something wrong with me? What is it that some girls don't like about other girls? Kindly advise me.

JAYNE.

Hitting the Bull's-Eye In Today's Social Arena

DEAR JAYNE: Nothing that happens in life is as mysterious as all this. You are telling me only a fragment of what you know, or suspect, to be the real explanation for your loss of popularity with girls in the neighborhood. I wonder, for instance, just how much lies back of your "dateless" social program since New Year's Eve. Have you turned down dates because you actually don't like boys very much? Or haven't you had any bids from boys the past four months?

As a girl gets up in the teens, her popularity with girls depends considerably on her popularity with boys—particularly if she is a public high school girl. This doesn't mean that she has to have boys begging her for dates several nights a week, or forming in a stag-line to the right to angle for her attention, every time she shows her face in public. But it does mean that she must be on genuinely friendly terms with boys (as with girls), so that she wouldn't lack for a willing partner if some sort of teen-age party were being arranged on the spur of the moment.

You should know the social customs of high school age persons as well as I, if not better. And it should hardly be necessary for me to remind you that high school "crowds"—of the after-school-hours social variety—run in packs of around 10 to 12 boys and girls, with the sexes about equally divided. If you're going to be "in," you must be as acceptable to one sex as to the other. Or, more precisely, perhaps, if the boys are on your side, the girls include you automatically—unless, of course, they think it socially damning to be seen with you, and that is seldom the case.

A girl may be ever so popular with her own sex up to 13 or 14 years of age, say; but after that age, the average girl grows increasingly "boy-conscious," and deliberately or unconsciously, most of her feminine alliances are built around the possibility of attracting boys into her social scheme of things. Those girls around 15 who don't like boys, or who can't make friends with them, or who are denied the privilege of associating casually with mixed groups, are gradually "dropped" as "deadwood" by their more enterprising and normally-developing sisters. So I suggest that you study the "boy-angle" of your situation. That's where the trouble may lie.

It is perfectly possible, of course, that your 16-year-old chum does actually regard you as an infant, from the imposing heights of her 12 months' seniority. And the girl who goes with the "different and not very-nice crowd" may now consider herself a jaded woman of the world, compared to you. And the third girl who "resents" you may mean it literally—i. e., may be annoyed by your assumption of familiarity, based on old association. Or she may mean that she is bored by you, now that childish play-bonds have been outlived.

The trouble may be that you haven't learned to row your own canoe, socially; that you had supposed you could ride through life on the coat tails of friendships made in childhood. But nothing could be further from the truth. Youth in its teens has an almost cruel aversion to being identified with certain "hang-over" associates from childhood, who aren't making distinctive individual progress on their own in an ever-broadening field of social experience. Make good on your own, in Today's social arena, and they're all for you; proud to know you and proud to have known you. But give evidence of being a hanger-on, and they can be bothered least of any.

My advice to you is to take the larger-than-neighborhood view of your potential social opportunities. Get a girl chum, if you must have one; but don't impose any restrictions, in your own mind, as to where she must live. Find some girl who shares your likes and dislikes; whose interests and activities dovetail with yours; who is an asset to you even as you will be to her. Make friends with boys at school; tie in with a good crowd; forget the girls in the neighborhood for the time being; and generally start your popularity-building program from scratch, in virgin territory. When you've hit the bull's-eye on the campus, the neighborhood old-timers will rally around again; and probably not before.

A New Role

A waffle iron need not spend its entire life making waffles. Try waffled bread. Trim the crusts from slices of bread, brush both sides lightly with butter, and brown in the center of a hot waffle iron. Delicious as a foundation for creamed foods, or as a "shortcake" with fruit and whipped cream.

Loaf's End

Put the last of a loaf of bread to good use by drying the slices in the oven and crushing them into crumbs. A covered jarful of crumbs comes in handy for breaded meats and fish, casserole dishes, and meat loaves.

Club Luncheon Features Pecan Wafers

HAVE YOU ever rallied around a luncheon table all perky with spring flowers—daffodils and tulips to be exact—and had such interesting and amusing luncheon companions that you forgot about food? Such was my experience at the Women's National Democratic Club luncheon yesterday. As cheerful as her bright red pocketbook was Mrs. B. S. Embry whose Southern accent and enthusiam for all things Southern would almost convert one to the Confederacy—if one weren't already such a Yankee.

Mrs. D. Tucker Brown who is known as Barbara Trigg Brown and gives interesting lectures on historic gardens of Virginia, as president of the club, presided. Mrs. Embry introduced the speaker, Miss Malvina Lindsay, editor of the Woman's Page of The Washington Post and author of the column "The Gentler Sex," who spoke on, "Woman Are Funny." Mrs. Emil Hurja with her contagious laughter and wearing an eyelet embroidery vestee that would make any woman envious was also a part of the general happy atmosphere.

But it was a luncheon and we did have food—very good food. There was chilled tomato uice wiith an exotic dash, lamb chops broiled to perfection, tender "June" peas, cheese potatoes, hot baking powder biscuits, coffee, and orange ice. But the pecan cookies served with the ice, is the item on the menu of which I feel like singing. They were just that crunchy crisp bit of the right flavor needed as a companion to the orange ice. So I got out my favorite pecan wafer recipe immediately and am giving it to you, for if you have forgotten there is such a delightful nicknack as these cookies I think you will like to be reminded.

Pecan Wafers

Sift 1 1-3 cups brown sugar. Whip until light 2 eggs and add the sugar gradually. Beat these ingredients until they are well blended. Add 5 tablespoons flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat the batter until it is smooth and add 1 cup broken nut meats. Oil cookie sheet and drop the batter on it by teaspoonsful, far apart. A pecan half may be put on cookie to decorate it. Bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees for about eight minutes. Remove from sheet while warm.

City Greets the Willkies With Eye to the Future

Although a 'Big Name' Republican, He Says He Is 'Not a Candidate for Anything;' Wife as Attractive as Her Noted Husband

By Hope Ridings Miller

"Have you met the Wendell Willkies?" is the question you hear on all sides these days when Presidential possibilities—either declared or suspected—seem to be around every corner, or at least, every top-flight dinner table.

MILLER
HOPE RIDINGS

Mr. Willkie insists, of course, that he is "not a candidate for anything," and his wife stanchly supports that stand; but just the same . . . you know how Washington is in an election year. Any Big Name who comes to town is roundly surveyed, feted, and discussed—just in case he decides to run.

Arriving here Saturday for the Gridiron dinner, Mr. Willkie was accompanied by his wife; and the two have been centers of Capital attention ever since. Originally, they had planned to return to New York late yesterday afternoon, but they postponed their departure in order to attend the dinner given last night by Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse. The party, arranged in honor of the Willkies, drew in a number of additional guests afterward.

Just as attractive as her noted husband is Mrs. Willkie, who is small and shy, is given to retiring to the background. Ferreted out, however, she talks easily and well, and proves on short order that she has a wide range of interests and an engaging sense of humor.

Her gray-blue eyes shine when she talks about either her husband or their son, Philip, who will graduate from Princeton this June and plans to enter law school this autumn. Truth is, she looks far too young to have a grown son. She is slim as a debutante and her short-cut graying hair swirls softly around her girlish face. You would never guess she has been married almost 23 years . . .

MRS. WILLKIE didn't change her name much when she became a bride. She is the former Edith Wilk, born in Tennessee, reared in Indiana, was graduated from the University of Indiana, and was a librarian for a couple of years before she married.

Although she hasn't spent much time in Washington in the past decade, she knows the town rather well. During the war, while her husband was soldiering overseas, she spent several months here with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Miller Hamilton, who now live in Indianapolis.

HERE AND THERE: Mrs. Lloyd Stark, wife of the Governor of Missouri, who made such a hit in Washington when she visited here briefly last autumn, will be back in town on May 2 to attend the National Institute of Government . . . She will be at the Hotel Washington . . . Mrs. Robert A. Taft, now on a history-making speaking tour in New England, was feted at a luncheon given on Saturday by Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, wife of the Governor of Rhode Island. Later, Mrs. Taft addressed a large meeting of Republican women . . . Lothrop Stoddard, who returned early in the winter from an extended stay in central Europe, has just completed a book, based on his observations in Germany. Entitled "Into the Darkness" it will be published in June . . . Today Mr. Stoddard will speak before the Washington Club at 11 a. m. . . . He is scheduled to talk to the Yale Club of Washington tomorrow.

Music Lovers Pay Tribute To Dr. Kindler

Testimonial Dinner Honors Director Of National Symphony

Musicians and music lovers, gathered around a festive board at the Mayflower last night, heard the honor guest, Dr. Hans Kindler, director of the National Symphony Orchestra, pay tribute to the Washingtonians who have worked for his success and for that of the orchestra itself for the past nine years.

The occasion was a testimonial dinner for Dr. Kindler given by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, moving spirits behind the Capital's No. 1 music project. As a climax for the event, Mr. Howe read a number of telegrams from prominent persons who have either watched Dr. Kindler's work with special interest or have appeared here with the National Symphony. Among those who sent messages were Mrs. Roosevelt, Leopold Stokowski, Lucrezia Boris, Myra Hess, Josef Huffman and Kirsten Flagstad.

Mr. Howe concluded his brief introductory speech by proposing a toast to Dr. Kindler, who at the close of his own speech proposed a toast to both Mr. and Mrs. Howe.

Diplomats Are Among Guests

The dinner, which was followed by a reception by the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association and Mr. and Mrs. Howe, took place in the Chinese Room of the hotel. A mammoth horseshoe table, with an additional long extension down the center, was decorated with low bowls of white stock and red tulips.

Mrs. Howe, smartly attired in biege chiffon made on flowing lines; Dr. Kindler, Senora de Cardenas, wife of the Spanish Ambassador; Countess van der Straten Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador; Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, the Yugoslav Minister and Mme. Fotitch, and the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon, were among those seated around the head of the horseshoe.

Mrs. Longworth Also Attending

Up and down the table, and all around it were scores of prominent out-of-towners, including Percy Grainger, famous pianist; Arthur Judson, manager of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and Charles O'Connell, director of artists and classical recordings for R. C. A.-Victor.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, gowned in black taffeta, accented with fold of pale blue taffeta in the fitted bodice and full skirt, was among those attending the dinner; as were Mrs. Tracy Dows, Countess Szechenyi, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, Admiral and Mrs. Emory Land, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss; C. C. Cappel, manager of the National Symphony, and Mrs. Cappel; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. R. H. Dunlap, Mrs. Frederick Essary, Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett

Many Notables Seen in Crowd

Still others there were the Congressional Librarian and Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Jelleff, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Landsburgh, Dr. and Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Barton K. Yount.

Also, Clarence Aspinwall, Mr. and Mrs. Foster Adams, Miss Mary B. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brooks, Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Clark, Olin Dows, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Droope, Charles W. Eliot, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Flather, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Milton King, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Steele, and several others.

Immediately after the dinner, the company proceeded to the grand ballroom of the hotel where several hundred additional guests attended the reception.

2,000 Attend Lavish Reception Concluding Pan American Festivities

Director, Dr. Rowe, Greets Guests at Door; Hulls Head Line

By Carolyn Bell

Concluding a tremendous flurry of festivities in connection with Pan American Week, over 2,000 guests were feted at a lavish reception last night given by the governing board of the Pan-American Union, of which Secretary of State Cordell Hull is chairman.

Around 9 o'clock top-hatted gentlemen and bejeweled ladies, by the dozens, entered the doors of one of the finest examples of architecture in the world—the Pan American Building. Standing at the entrance to greet the guests was Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan-American Union. The arrivals trooped up one of the broad stairways and into the Hall of the Americas to greet their hosts.

Meanwhile the Navy orchestra played softly in the patio. No doubt enjoying the music were the two bright birds, a macaw and parrot, perched unconcernedly on their stands. The orchids—20 different varieties—imported for Pan American Week, festooned the tropical trees, such as banana, papaya and cocoanut.

President's Portrait Is on Display

Pan American week started April 8 and extended through April 14. However because the last day, which has been Pan-American day since 1930, fell on Sunday, the reception was postponed until last evening. Very much an object of interest last night was the portrait of President Roosevelt, painted by a Guatemalan artist, which was presented to the Union only yesterday.

The Hall of the Americas—where guests shook hands with the 39 members of the receiving line—was banked, on all sides, with ferns. At one end of the long room, where stands the bust of Andrew Carnegie, there was a large basket filled with lilies and red carnations. At the other end stood an equally gorgeous basket filled with lilies, purple iris and white gladioli. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull headed the receiving line. Mrs. Hull was stately in her gown of white brocade cut on classic lines with a very full back. She had thrown an ermine cape over her shoulders to ward off any draught which might bring back that cold she threw off in Florida. Standing next to the Hulls was the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro. He is vice chairman of the board. Senora de Castro was fetching in a full skirted black frock.

Peruvian Envoy Member of Board

Others in the line were members of the board and they included the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the Peruvian Ambassador, Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Argentine Ambassador, Don Felipe Espil, who was not accompanied by Mme. Espil as she is ill with a cold; the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, she looking particularly lovely in a smart black frock; the Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Alfaro, the Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora de Martins and the Ambassador of Venezuela and Senora de Escalante. One of the loveliest gowns of the evening was worn by Senora de Escalante. It was made of pale peach silk, off the shoulder, and with a wide hoopskirt. Also hoopskirted was their daughter, Senorita Maria Teresa Escalante, whose frock was of pink satin.

Still others in the receiving line included the Ambassador of Chile and Senora de Cabero, the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, the Minister of Uruguay, Jose Richling; the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Guachalla, the Minister of Haiti and Mme. Lescot, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de Debayle, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceras, the Minister of Paraguay and Senora de Fernandez, the Charge d'Affaires of Cuba and Senora de Baron and the Charge d'Affaires of Guatemala and Senora de Lopez-Herrarte.

After shaking hands with their hosts, guests wandered about admiring first one room and then another. Particularly lovely was the magnificent display of orchids in the room adjoining the Hall of the Americas. They were masses in a large silver vase. Downstairs in the map room, off the patio, a bar was set up. Later in the evening guests gathered there for a buffet supper. There was continuous dancing after the receiving line dispersed. Barnee's music was supplemented by that of the Navy Band.

Navy Orchestra Plays; Imported Orchids Festoon Trees

The diplomatic corps turned out, with only a few exceptions, for this brilliant party. Officials also shared the spotlight. Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, were there as were Attorney General and Mrs. Robert A. Jackson, the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Senator and Mrs. John G. Townsend, and Mrs. Lister Hill, bachelor Senator Rush Holt, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. Harold R. Stark, Mr. and Mrs. Breckenridge Long, the Commandant of the Navy Yard and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, and Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf Berle.

Representative O'Day Among Guests

Representative Caroline O'Day, who is an ardent worker for the People's Mandate Committee, was among the guests. Incidentally the mandate committee, Mrs. Thomas Burke, chairman, and Miss Mabel Vernon, director, entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Hay-Adams House. Honor guests were 20 young Latin-American women from the Pan American Center in New York.

THE MARRIAGE of Miss Elizabeth Rice Barrett and Douglas Rathbone Smith takes place on Saturday at 4 o'clock at St. James' Episcopal Church, with a reception following at Ridgelea, the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Richard Rice Barrett, in Warrenton, Va.

Many parties are being planned in honor of the couple from now until the day of the wedding. Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman will give a dinner party at the North Wales Club in Warrenton in honor of her granddaughter and fiance on Friday evening. Mrs. Adeline Serre gave a large luncheon for them on Sunday, and preceding this party Mrs. J. H. Dorst entertained the guests at a cocktail party. Mrs. William C. Marsgall, Mrs. David Warren and Miss Sarah Warren also entertained for the engaged couple.

Miss Warren will be one of the bridesmaids at the wedding. Miss Betsey Charrington, another bridesmaid, gave a large supper party on Saturday night and Miss Mary Seldon Kennedy entertained at cocktails preceding the party. Miss Doris Becker, of Warrenton, who will also be a bridesmaid, gave a "dove" luncheon for the bride-elect and her attendants earlier in the week.

THE MISSES Fanny Nelson Lyon and Miss Mary Owen Lyon entertained at a large luncheon party on Sunday at their home, Black Oak Ridge, near Purcellville, Va., for members of the younger set.

About the Town with DUDLEY HARMON

THE ST. VALENTINE for New York's largest department store is Mrs. Charles Stone, daughter of the Frederick Brooke of Washington. Mrs. Stone not only has made a tremendous success of her personal shopping service there, but is responsible for numerous romances which burgeoned after she started a "Lonely Hearts Club."

Noticing that there were many young college graduates employed who had trouble making friends in the big city, Mrs. Stone organized weekly luncheons so that the pretty girl in stockings could meet the boy in neckwear, etc. Gradually the fame of these get-togethers spread to Wall Street, with the result that brokers began to clamor for invitations. The result is that girls who began eating weekly luncheons at the store cafeteria have now graduated to the Colony Restaurant.

Mrs. Stone frequently comes to the Capital for brief visits with her parents, Mrs. Brooke, incidentally, has been working 12 hours a day for the success of the Wirth Circus, which is performing this week for the benefit of the Children's Hospital. Regarding the benefit, Marion Shouse phones to say that tickets bought at the Children's Hospital Circus headquarters, 1653 Pennsylvania avenue, rather than at the gate, result in a greater percentage for the hospital.

SPRING DANCES in private gardens or homes are one of the most pleasant features of Washington life.

Mr. and Mrs. George Howe and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., are planning such an affair for May 11. They will entertain at the Howes' new old house on P street, Georgetown. It will be a costume affair, with masks compulsory.

The dance will have to be a small one, as space is limited, and the hosts are already wondering how they can possibly squeeze in all the people they'd like to invite.

THE ONLY ICELANDER in the Danish Legation here, Agnar Jonsson, is continuing with his diplomatic career even though his country severed its government from Denmark after the German invasion. Before Hitler moved in on Copenhagen Jonsson had been ordered to New York as vice consul and began his duties there yesterday. His successor here is his predecessor in New York, A. T. Tscherning, a bachelor.

ODDS AND ENDS: Recent visitors to Washington include Mrs. Malcolm Baldridge, for whom Mrs. Chauncey Parker entertained at a recent luncheon, and Mrs. William White, who has been staying with the Samuel Spencers. She is a daughter-in-law of a former Member of Congress . . . Frank Morse, famous as an amateur cook, has written a new book, "Cavalcade of the Rails," out next week. Only a year or so ago Mr. Morse published a biography of Henry Miller, the famous actor, whose son is Gilbert Miller, the producer . . . Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish have issued invitations to the debut of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Stuyvesant Fish, on Saturday, May 4.

In order to avoid losing any of the guests, en route from the luncheon to the ball game through the large crowd that always flocks to Griffith Stadium on opening day, the Masons put all their guests in a private bus and deliver them en masse to a side gate at the ball park.

Heroines of 'Other America' Described at A. A. U. W. Tea

Women From Nations of Hemisphere Are Guests of Honor at Celebration Of Pan-American Union's Anniversary

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

Heroines of "the other America" were described by distinguished Latin-American women yesterday afternoon at a tea given by the American Association of University Women, in their honor and in celebration of the anniversary of the Pan American Union. Miss Irene A. Wright, of the division of cultural relations of the State Department, presided at the program which was sponsored by the international relations committee of the Washington branch of the association.

"We are about to discover," said Miss Wright, that "the other American woman" retains beauty and grace while exhibiting extraordinary intellectual ability, creative artistry, physical courage, patriotism and statesmanship."

The ranking guest speaker, Mme. Andres Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic, mentioned several of the women of her country before paying highest tribute to Dona Salome Urena de Henriquez, poetess, educator and patriot, "the very symbol of Dominican womanhood, harbinger of the dictrine of social and political equality of women in Santo Domingo."

Mme. Graciela Estigarribia de Fernandez, wife of the Minister of Paraguay, told in Spanish of "The Paraguayan Mother."

Speaker Honors Heroine of Cuba

This statue stands as a symbol of those mothers who, when their sons had fallen before the Triple Alliance in a war of extermination against Paraguay, took up their weapons and withstood the enemy. "Paraguay lives because they died," she said.

Mme. Jose T. Baron, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of Cuba, mentioned many heroines, first among them Ana de Quesada, wife of the chief of the revolution of 1868, who accompanied her husband to the battlefield. She bore a child there who died. Later, she came to New York, where she aided the Cuban cause in this country and bore another son. She lived to see Cuba free and that son, for eight years Cuban minister to the United States.

Fresia, wife of Caupolican, an Araucan chief, was chosen by Mme. Emmita de Vries de Gazitua, wife of the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy, as the earliest heroine of her country. Among others she mentioned was Blanca Jara Quemada, who, during Chile's war for independence against Spain, presented brave resistance.

Mme. Samper-Ortega, wife of the Counselor of the Colombian Embassy, was assisted in the presentation of her paper by her compatriot, Mrs. Harry Pierson. As representative of Colombian women, she chose Antonia Santos, a beautiful young woman of high standing, who commanded a body of troops at the close of Colombia's war for liberty from Spain and met death before a firing squad.

Mexican Women Among Patriots

Miss Carmen Baez, Third Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, speaking for her country, gave first place to Josefa Oritz, wife of Dominguez, the magistrate who in 1810 stood up for imprisoned and betrayed patriots.

"Later in our history," said Miss Baez, "the name of the Mexican woman in arms for ideals is Guadalupe la Chinaca, fighting in the vanguard by her husband's side. In 1910, it is Lucrecia Toriz. Later still it is Adelita, and Valentina—and the unknown name of the anonymous camp-follower marching beside her man with their home in a pack upon her back. In 1917, when victory crowns the ideals of the people, she returns to her labors in the field, in the factory, in the house—but ready," Miss Baez concluded, "to sally forth again if called by her country to resume her people's eternal fight for liberty."

Miss Wright, who spent many years in Spain and also lived in Cuba, was a ready interpreter whenever any of the guest speakers talked in their native tongue. She presented them before a background of flags of the Americas.

Another honor guest was Mme. de Lima, who also spoke briefly.

Mrs. John Donaldson is chairman of the committee under which the program was sponsored.

The tea hostesses were Mrs. Lucy S. Howorth, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club; Mrs. Paul Heyl, Mrs. Lalla Cornish, Miss Anna Fenton, Dr. Alice T. Merrill, Miss Emma B. Hawks, Miss Mabel Hiatt and Miss Margaret McManus.

KAY WILKINS, who is taking the part of Susan Trexel in the Montgomery Players' production of "Susan and God" Saturday night at the Leland Junior High School, is one of the prominent members of the drama section of the Chevy Chase Woman's Club.

There she has been active reading, directing and playing in the drama section productions. Miss Wilkins who, off the stage, is the wife of Thomas Wilkins, Washington attorney, credits her performance as Lady Bucktrout, in the English comedy, "Short Story" given last year by the section, with bringing her the assignment to play "Susan."

KAY WILKINS

Frederick Kerby, husband of Mrs. Kerby, president of the Chevy Chase Club, played the lead role in "Short Story" and there had opportunity to observe her portrayal. When he was assigned to direct "Susan and God" for the Montgomery Players he invited her to read at the tryouts and—"well, here I am, neglecting husband and little daughters and working my head off as Susan," she said.

Other distinctions which have recently come to Miss Wilkins are second acting honors in the Washington One-Act Play Tournament, and having played the lead in "Never Too Old," which placed second in the tournament Saturday night.

Minister Hero As Police Shoot Holdup Man

Assistant Pastor Foils Grocery Bandit By Hailing Scout Car

After two of the five .38-caliber bullets fired by Theodore Marquis, police private, had struck a bandit in a grocery store at 311 K street northwest, yesterday, a minister who gave the police the alarm explained it this way:

"It really was a pleasant job. Being an old Army man, I remembered the Army saying, 'Never lose your head, because it's the best part of your body.'"

The Rev. Jesse McCoy Hanson, assistant pastor of Unity Spiritual Church, 444 P street northwest, was entering the grocery store to get a $9 check cashed when he heard an oath and saw a colored man, wearing overalls and smoked glasses, forcing customers and the manager, Charles D. Godwin, into a rear storage room.

Police Car Hailed

At this juncture, the minister was ordered by the bandit, Ralph Waldo Greene, 29, colored, 1139 Twenty-third street northwest, to join the others in the rear room. But the minister backed out. There he waited on the curb for five minutes, he said, until the police scout car, from No. 1 Police Precinct Station, came in sight.

"'Hey,' I hollered, 'a holdup is going on in here,'" he related. Marquis, accompanied by R. E. Maust, another private, entered, and Marquis inquired if there was any trouble. Police Inspector Bernard Thompson later reported that Greene then wheeled slowly, showing his .45 caliber revolver, and the shooting by Marquis followed. Godwin ducked.

Of five shots fired, one struck Greene in the upper abdomen, another in his left arm. He did not fall, but was becoming increasingly weak on his feet as the policemen helped him to the car and to Casualty Hospital, where his condition was described as "fair" last night.

From the safe in the rear room, Greene had compelled the manager to produce $315.85, with $12.50 in checks. He had taken an undetermined sum from the cash register. He had made the manager give him several packages of cigarettes. All this occurred while the Rev. Mr. Hanson, who lives at 1018 Fourth street northwest, was on the curb awaiting sight of police.

"God moves in mysterious ways his wonders to perform," the minister commented. "My little charity program may be helped by the publicity."

He conducts charity activities in a hospital here and is employed by the District Recreation Department as an aircraft specialist in colored recreation centers. He flies a plane and reminds that he is a "citizen who wants to do right." He said, "I am a man who has lived in the same house my family occupied for 70 years."

Police checked Greene's record to find: first arrested in November, 1925, at age of 14, and charged with housebreaking; again arrested in February, 1932, for illegally transporting whisky and using an automobile smoke screen, being sentenced to a year and a day in November, 1932; in May, 1936, he was sentenced to 180 days for carrying a concealed weapon, and in March, 1937, he was sentenced to from one to two years for robbery.

THIS CHART MAKES CAR PRICES CLEAR

It shows all items in the price you pay, provides your best protection against "packed" prices

MAYBE you've been buying automobiles for a long time.

Maybe you figure that the way to get the best "deal" is to play one dealer against another until you get the highest trade-in figure for your old car.

But do you figure out the actual money difference between the old-car allowance and the new-car delivered price?

Do you take steps to make sure something has not been slipped into the delivered price to take care of the extra allowance you get for your old car?

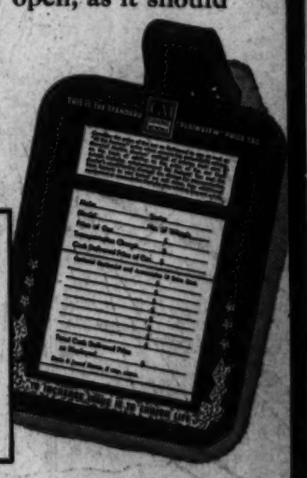
That is called "packing"—and your only real protection against it is to get a full and clear itemized statement of all details in the price.

You get these details from the "plainview" price chart and price tag we General Motors dealers use.

You see the price of the car itself—the charge for transportation, based on rail rates—our charge for any optional equipment or accessories you may elect to buy.

The whole deal is out in the open, as it should be, and you can see exactly what you pay for what you get.

How about dropping in and talking this over?



This is the standard price tag used by General Motors dealers to show what makes up the prices of new cars delivered to customers. "PRICE OF CAR" means the price we charge for the car itself, including reimbursement for Federal Tax and conditioning—"TRANSPORTATION CHARGE" means a charge for transportation from factory to you, based on rail rates — "OPTIONAL EQUIPMENT AND ACCESSORIES" means the charge for any extra equipment or accessories you elect to buy.

BEFORE YOU BUY, BE SURE THE FINANCE CHARGES SATISFY YOU

Northeast 'Firetrap' Razing Asked

Lincoln Parkers Name Committee To Investigate Area Buildings

Razing of "firetrap" buildings in five Northeast sections was urged last night at a meeting of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association.

The unit appointed a committee of five to investigate the buildings, described as being fire hazards and unsanitary, with a view to their demolition. The committee includes William B. Phalen, W. B. Hickox, Mrs. M. West, Mrs. H. Moose and G. L. Shafer.

Members voted to seek aid of the Board of Health and the Police and Fire departments in calling attention to the condition of the buildings. The management of one structure is planning to make an addition to an already ramshackle frame building, it was charged.

The association also voted full cooperation with the Northeast Businessmen's Association in preventing the threatened abandonment of the Northeast Boys Club. A committee composed of G. L. Schafer, A. T. Cox and Francis St. Austell was appointed to further the move.

Members indorsed the resolution of the Petworth unit urging zoning legislation to ban issuance of licenses to liquor stores within 600 feet of a church or school instead of within 400 feet as at present. Eighteen new members were elected.

Northwest Council

Congressional bills calling for regulation of dentists, barbers, embalmers and chiropodists were opposed by the Northwest Citizens Council last night on the grounds of being privileged legislation.

Approved were bills which allow sabbatical leave for teachers; establish primary voting machinery; permit election of two civilian Commissioners.

A move to erect a stadium in the District was approved with the provision that it accommodate more than 100,000 persons and that the money does not come out of the District budget. A resolution was adopted urging the National Capital Parks and the Engineer Commissioner to see what can be done about beautifying the southeast corner of Woodrow Wilson High School, Nebraska avenue and Chesapeake street northwest, where a spring is located.

Referred to the Woodrow Wilson Home and School Association was the council's disapproval of fraternities and sororities in all District high schools as not belonging to a democratic school system. Request for construction of a rifle range at Woodrow Wilson High was made for a second time.

Lincoln Civic

A "competent colored attorney who has been in active practice" here was recommended by the Lincoln Civic Association last night for the Police Court judgeship left vacant by appointment of Judge Edward M. Curran as District Attorney.

The association also indorsed Col. West A. Hamilton for reappointment to the Board of Education. It was announced the Rock Creek Citizens Association would be supported in its fight to retain Rose Park playground at Twenty-seventh and O streets northwest for colored children.

A resolution was adopted calling for 15 minutes of non-sectarian devotional exercises at the beginning of each day in public schools. The present period is five minutes.

Fraternal Order of Eagles

Joseph M. Bonuso, local attorney, last night was indorsed for appointment to the vacant Police Court judgeship at a meeting of the Washington Aerie No. 125 of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Bonuso was also nominated for presidency of the unit at a meeting at the Raleigh Hotel. Other officers named were John McCarthy and M. H. Gaay, vice president; H. Rosenbaum, secretary; M. R. Seltzer, treasurer; C. Murray, conductor; R. Irish, chaplain; P. Romano, inside guard; T. Funari, outside guard; T. Funari, outside guard; C. Taylor and J. R. Booker, trustees.

House Passes Bill To Give 5,000 Widows Pensions

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday legislation which would add nearly 5,000 widows of Civil War veterans to the pension rolls.

The Pensions Committee said the measure would increase the annual pension bill by $1,026,000.

The House also approved a bill to extend veterans' hospital benefits to civilian employes of the quartermaster general who served during the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection or Boxer Rebellion and were discharged for disability incurred in such service.

Reductions for day station-to-station calls begin with a 5-cent cut for 421 miles and increase to $2.50 less per 3-minute call coast to coast. Night, Sunday and person-to-person calls also have been reduced.

Day station-to-station rates from Washington are as follows:

Brown Tells Census Eager Just to Wait

Enumerator Will Get To You, Supervisor Says, in Due Time

Don't worry, don't be uneasy, don't feel slighted if the census man has not yet knocked on your door.

This was the injunction yesterday of Garnett R. Brown, District census supervisor, as the sixteenth decennial count moved into the second day of its third week. A fortnight was originally planned for completing the enumeration.

Several thousand District residents have not been counted, Brown said, but "no one is going to be missed." The count, he predicted, may take a week or more longer than originally planned.

The fact is that so many people have evidently feared they would not be included in the census because they had received no call from an enumerator by last Saturday that the local offices have received scores of letters, telephone calls and visits from the public offering information.

Such a great number of people called in person at the Commerce Department, Brown said, that a special enumerator has been detailed there. The enumerator, Francis X. Nagle, has a desk set up in the national headquarters of the census and says he likes his indoor work as much as the pavement-pounding he did for two weeks in the house-to-house canvas.

"Stay put until the enumerator gets to your house," Brown advises. He does not want a horde of census-conscious Washingtonians to rush to Nagle's desk.

Maloney, Turner Win Catholic U. Oratory Plaques

Cornelis L. Maloney, jr., Catholic University senior, last night won the Rector's oratorical contest over three rival debaters at McMahon Hall. His topic was "The Philosophy of Patriotism."

Maloney and James C. Turner, jr., also a senior, whose address on "Youth—1940" earned him second honors, were presented with plaques by Bishop Joseph M. Corrigan, university rector.

Other contestants were Robert F. Doran, who spoke on "Social Courage," and Robert C. Sullivan, "Youth and the American Ideal." Judges included the Very Rev. Lawrance J. Shehan, director of charities for the Washington archdiocese; Representative John M. Costello (Democrat), of California, and Harry C. Butcher, vice president, Columbia Broadcasting System. The contest was sponsored by the Shahan Debating Society.

Charity Circus Thrills Audience In 21-Act Show

Charity-conscious circus lovers turned out last night for two and a half hours of entertainment held under the "big top" of Riverside Stadium for the benefit of Children's Hospital.

It was the opening night of a week's engagement of the Frank Wirth Circus—21 acts of clowning, thrills and tableaux.

Children and parents alike, cheered the performance of Bengal tigers coerced into docility by a masterful trainer, and a herd of seals that balanced each other on their flippers.

Aerial gymnasts swooped through the air suspended from ropes and rings. A bevy of a "golden girls" performed in statuesque Indian tableaux.

Humorous highlight of the show was the antics of Poodles Hannaford, who plunged on and off of a giant white charger, ripping off a series of coats and vests, and sailing a boomerang derby that miraculously return to him after describing arcs over the audience.

The climax of the show featured bicyclists riding precariously on a high wire in midair 40 feet above the ring.

Schulte Calls 30-Hour Week Only Way Out

Central Labor Union Indorses Indiana Man for Reelection

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, last night urged "unity in view of the onslaught on organized labor" at a meeting of the Central Labor Union of the A. F. L. at Typographical Hall, 423 G street northwest.

Representative Schulte referred to the Smith bill amendment, which he maintained would "wreck all the good done in the past seven years" by the Labor Relations Board.

He said the 30-hour week was "the only thing that will save us today" in view of rapid technological advances.

The union went on record unanimously indorsing Schulte for reelection to the House.

The group went on record requesting the Central Labor Union of Baltimore "to do what they can to keep Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy from coming back to Congress" on the grounds of his opposition to the teachers' sabbatical leave bill. The organization also went on record recommending that members of the police and fire departments in the District have the right to retire voluntarily after 25 years of service.

Social Council Against Change In Child Act

Delegates to Meeting Against Amendments 'As Individuals'

Delegates to the Council of Social Agencies at its annual meeting yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. opposed "as individuals" amendments to the child labor law now before Congress. Their resolution said the law would be so weakened as to make children subject to "pernicious influences."

Action of the council change its name from Washington Council of Social Agencies to Council of Social Agencies of the District of Columbia and Vicinity was among revisions in its by-laws voted yesterday by the organization at its annual meeting at the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Bernton Cites Cost

Other changes included definition of three types of membership—agency, individual and associated groups; extending a vote to delegates from public agencies; limitation of terms of individual members to three years; limitation of terms of president, vice president and committee chairmen to three years, and increasing elected board members from 15 to 18. This action was taken on recommendation of the committee to change the by-laws after its report was submitted by Mrs. Pearl Klein, chairman.

Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, president of the council, declared its work in connection with 16 activities was accomplished last year "at a cost of 1.8 per cent of the total amount raised by the Community Chest. This compares most favorably with St. Louis, participating in 12 activities and costing 3.9 per cent; Cleveland, with six activities and costing 3.5 per cent, and Pittsburgh, with ten activities and a cost of 2.3 per cent."

"Practical People"

"The broad social program of Washington, costing about $21,500,000, requires continual study of social conditions and constant appraisal of the validity of the work being done," she said.

"Were there no coordinating and study group such as the council, much of our work would be haphazard and done at cross purposes," declared Col. John J. Allen, public relations director of the Salvation Army of New York City. He said social workers are not dreamers, but "practical people seeking a solution to the individual and community on a practical basis."

Elected to the board of directors were James V. Bennett, Leifur Magnusson, Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, Mrs. William Kittle and Dr. Benjamin E. Mays.

Fifteen individual members of the council were elected or reelected. They are Bennett, Mrs. Kittle, Dr. Mays, Mrs. Whitman Cross, Dr. Ernest S. Griffith, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Owen Lovejoy, Mrs. E. C. Nourse, Vincent Sabcardi, Elisabeth Christman, Arthur Schoenthal, Walter S. Ufford, Mrs. Walter S. Ufford, Mrs. Prentiss Wilson and Dr. Carl Wells.

Walter Barkdull, jr., 3011 Foxhall road northwest, was named editor of The American Eagle, student weekly, and Sarah Stewart, 1414 Shepherd street northwest, editor of the Aucola, college yearbook, at the annual Publications banquet at American University last night.

Richard Hollander, managing editor of the Washington Daily News, was the principal speaker at the banquet, which was sponsored by Pi Delta Epsilon, national honorary journalistic fraternity. Helen Miller, president of the American University Chapter, was toastmistress.

At the banquet, new members for the journalistic fraternity were tapped. They include Barkdull, Miss Stewart, Frances Cruikshank, Sarah Ann Rapp, Babette Liebman, Gordon Jowers, Robert Little, Daniel Wentz, Margaret Ellison and Carter Edmonds.

Named for the Pi Delta Epsilon Honor Roll for their activities in journalism during the year were William Adams, 1714 Kilbourne place northwest; Marion Mattes, Scranton, Pa.; Latimer Evans, and Virginia Goodwin, Bethesda, Md.

Gardner Admits Perjury, Faces 2 to 10 Years

Fraser S. Gardner, 39-year-old detective, yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of perjury before the Dies Committee, and faces a prison term of two to ten years.

Gardner admitted his guilt on one count of the indictment against him a few minutes before his trial was due to start before Justice Peyton Gordon of the District Court. A second count was dismissed.

Gardner was accused of lying to the committee about his connection with the anti-Jewish Silver Shirt organization of William Dudley Pelley. The committee charged Gardner with trying to get on its staff of investigators so he could sabotage its work.

Club Urges More Aid In District

Monday Evening Unit Supports Increases In Health Program, Relief, Child Help

Sweeping recommendations for improvement of health and extension of family, child and social welfare in the Washington area were adopted last night at the Y. W. C. A. by the Monday Evening Club, whose more than 450 members include leading public welfare workers of this city.

Many of the proposals parallel closely suggestions made by Mrs. Roosevelt when she appeared recently before the House District Committee to testify on conditions in local welfare institutions.

More Relief Asked

Among the recommendations are the following:

Increased public work relief and public assistance opportunities for Washingtonians.

A new Public Health building to centralize Health Department work.

A total of 350 more hospital beds at Gallinger Hospital—100 for pediatrics and 250 for convalescent and maternity cases.

Three health centers and full-time directors for cancer control, dental hygiene, mental hygiene and a tuberculosis clinic; 75 additional public health nurses, eight more sanitary inspectors, a health center in the central part of the city, four additional tuberculosis division workers and initiation of a mental hygiene division.

Youth placement programs and more vocational training in the District's schools.

Help for children to include more funds under the "aid for dependent children" clause of the Social Security Act, additional Board of Public Welfare personnel, an adoption law meeting prescribed standards, care of illegitimate children, a law for licensing and inspecting all child caring institutions in the District.

A public defender for the District.

A law against loan sharks.

More Parole Board personnel.

Nominees Listed

The club determined to sponsor the Public Health Service survey of District health facilities in 1937-38, the five-year program of the District Board of Education and the "Kepec" report on child welfare.

A slate of nominees for elections next month was read by the president, Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Juvenile Court. The nominees are:

Maj. Charles H. Dodd, president; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, first vice president; Louise McGuire, second vice president; K. Virginia Timmons, treasurer, and Morris Klass, secretary. Nominees for additional members of the executive board were: James V. Bennett, Mrs. Henry S. Bernton, Beatrice Hodgson, the Rev. John L. Mixon, William H. Savin and Judge Bentley.

Other actions of the club last night were a resolution supporting bills in Congress to facilitate cooperatives in the District and a resolution opposing amendments to the child labor law, which would allow children of 14 or more to appear in theatrical performances here until 11 p. m.

D.A.R. Asked to Lift Constitution Hall Negro Artist Ban

The Marian Anderson controversy of last year echoed again yesterday as a telegram was sent to Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the D. A. R., with an urgent request for the organization to remove "the ban on Negro artists appearing in Constitution Hall."

The Marian Anderson Citizens' Committee, of which Charles Houston is chairman and John Lovell, jr., secretary, sent the message, asking "reconsideration and removal of this gratuitous wrong to the pride and hearts of your Negro fellow citizens."

Marian Anderson, the Negro singer, gave her concert outdoors at the Lincoln Memorial on Easter Sunday, 1939, after arrangements could not be made for a performance in Constitution Hall. The situation was an issue during the D. A. R. Congress last year.

D.C. Police Trap Two Men Wanted In Holdup Shooting

Two Washington men, sought in connection with the holdup shooting of a Baltimore newspaperman and five robberies in Baltimore, were arrested yesterday after walking into a police trap here.

The men, 22 and 28, were also being questioned last night in regard to the shooting and robbery of William E. Gladstone, 6115 Fifth street northwest, Try-Me Bottling Co. collector, in a $600 holdup.

The Baltimore Sun employe was shot three times on March 12 during the fifth of a series of tavern holdups by two bandits. He is Robert Murray, 47, of Baltimore.

2 Men, 2 Women Force Entrance, Hold Up Family

A man and his family were held up and robbed last night by two men and two women who forced their way into their home, and four young women were victimized by bandits and burglars.

Joe Demetreo, of 612 G street northwest, had just entered his home when the quartet pushed their way in the front door, stood Demetreo, his wife and four children against a wall and took $55 he had saved for the rent. One of the women, Demetreo said, was "very old."

Marjorie Hilton, of 1815 Nineteenth street northwest, awoke in her second floor room to discover a colored man climbing in a window and screamed. Gladys T. Davis, of 1727 Massachusetts avenue northwest, lost $60 to a burgler who also frightened Ruth Johnson, a roomer on the same floor. Louise Eckburg, of 1719 Riggs place northwest, lost $6 to a colored footpad who cut her pocketbook from her arm.

8,000 Beat Income Tax Deadline

Special Workers Clear Last-Day Stampede to Pay District Levy

Upward of 8,000 persons filed through the first floor corridor of the District Building yesterday and all but a handful beat the midnight deadline for payment of the new District income tax.

A stampede came shortly after 4 p. m., when Government offices closed for the day, but by midnight 30 special tax office workers assigned to handle the crowds were merely marking time at their improvised desks, after a day's work that began at 8:30 a. m.

Edward Dent, tax assessor, said it was the largest single day's crowd since the office opened for collections two months ago.

Dent said he would have no estimate of the total amount taken in before tomorrow noon. His staff is about two days behind in opening mail, Dent added, and must finish that task today.

He estimated that more than 1,500 persons received help in making out their returns yesterday and another 6,500 appeared to have their tax blanks notarized.

Only a "small percentage" of the taxpayers have filed the new levy under protest, Dent declared.

New Justice Honored At Dinner Given By Civic Committee

Justice David A. Pine, newly appointed to the District Court, received a series of 16 spoken tributes last night at a dinner of the Public Order Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

Among those who paid the tributes to Justice Pine were Odell S. Smith, chairman of the Public Order Committee, who last night celebrated completion of his twenty-seventh year in that post, and was congratulated by the speakers for his services; Fred Smith and James Colliflower, vice presidents of the Board of Trade; Capt. Patrick H. Tansey and Capt. John L. Person, assistant Engineer Commissioners; Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter, Dr. J. Gregg Custis, Joseph Burkhardt, and Charles A. Bates, vice chairmen of the committee; Edgar Morris and Claude Owen, past presidents of the Board of Trade; W. W. Everitt, George Plitt, David Hart, Lewis Demit and Joseph McGarraghy.

Justice Pine acknowledged the tributes with a short informal speech, expressing thanks for the support he has received in past years from the Public Order Committee and voicing his hope that this help would continue.

"What... Go to an Advertising Dentist?"

Dentistry is a business as well as a profession—so let's face the facts. Some people may tell you not to go to a dentist who "advertises." What does MY advertising do? It creates a larger volume of business and I am thereby able to offer my services and work to you at greatly reduced prices.

I know that you can get no better materials or more careful attention than what is given to you in this office, regardless of what work is done, or how much you pay. I have been in this city for 40 years. The dentists who are associated with me are all graduate dentists, conscientious—and have your interest and welfare at heart.

I urge you to take care of your teeth. If you have a dentist, see him regularly. If you don't, I invite you to come to my offices for a free examination. If any work or treatment is necessary, you may be sure that my prices will be reasonable and fair.

David O. Selznick Earns Place in Top Brackets

Earlier Successes Bolster Reputation Climaxed by 'Gone With the Wind;' News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS HIGH TIME, to whittle out a new phrase, for David Oliver Selznick to be assigned to a permanent niche up toward the top of the higher brackets of the foremost motion picture producers in Hollywood.

Mr. Selznick's most immediate celebrity, of course, rests upon his unique feat in telescoping Margaret Mitchell's six-day reading race, "Gone With the Wind," into 3 hours and 47 minutes of screen action that was partially superb and partially tawdry, just like the book from which it was so skillfully adapted by the late Sidney Howard. Made at a cost of approximately $4,000,000, there was great fear and trepidation in some quarters that "GWTW" never would be able to recover its production cost at the box-office. In something like four months it has smothered all of these anxieties by grossing a round $20,000,000 at the ticket wickets, with many first-run outlets still untouched and the popular-priced and neighborhood engagements lying rosily ahead in the future. By the time the picture has run its full course the first time around, it will have accumulated a "take" three or four times as great as that of any motion picture ever before made. So much for that.

BELL

But Mr. Selznick's claim to preeminence in his craft does not depend solely upon "Gone With the Wind." If one were to run down his record as a producer prior to the picturization of the Mitchell marathon melodrama, he would find that Dave Selznick also was responsible for such noteworthy releases as "David Copperfield," "Anna Karenina," "The Tale of Two Cities," "Little Lord Fauntleroy"—the one with Freddie Bartholomew in the title role, instead of Mary Pickford—"A Star Is Born," "The Prisoner of Zenda," in its most recent manifestation, "Nothing Sacred" and numerous other works that rank high in the public and critical ratings. This incomplete list of productional achievements alone is enough to place the head man of Selznick International in an elbow-rubbing position with the leaders of the industry.

Dave, the son of Lewis J. Selznick a famous producer of the old silent days, however, is a hard guy to satisfy. Having shot at the moon several times and hit it every time, he continues to keep his aim up. Take "Rebecca," the picture currently packing them in at Loew's Palace, for instance. As my tired right hand, Mr. Coe, already has told you, "Rebecca" is a superior example of book adaptation—by Robert E. Sherwood and Joan Harrison—direction, by Alfred Hitchcock, and acting by Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, Judith Anderson, Florence Bates and all the other members of a long and distinguished cast. Unimportant impediments to the complete integrity of the picture seem to me to be the precipitate wooing and wedding of Max de Winter and the second Mrs. de Winter and the indecisiveness of a climax and denouement that leave a shadow of doubt as to whether Max really had murdered his first wife, "Rebecca"—the greatest unseen force in the story—or merely thought he had. Such nebulous complaints, nevertheless, cannot dull the forcefulness or the impeccable deftness with which the Daphne du Maurier novel has been translated into celluloid. Not seeing "Rebecca" is something you will always regret—or should.

Those of his friends who have wondered what has become of Clifford Brooke, for many seasons director of Stephen E. Cochran's National Theater Players and co-founder with Panjandrum Cochran of his school of dramatic art, will be interested to know that for the past five weeks he has been working with Errol Flynn in "The Sea Hawk," under the direction of Mike Curtiz, with further roles to follow on the Warner lot. "Brookie" went West several months ago to restage some of his earlier stage successes, including "Lombardi, Ltd.," with Leo Carrillo, and "Red Bumble Bee." He says the last one stung him, so, after 11 years, he returned to pictures, thanks to a lucky break and a successful screen test. Toward the end of his letter, "Brookie" says, "I still have a great affection for you all in Washington, bless you." So now you know.

Then that eminent itinerant stentor, "Bill" Fields, stopped by the desk to bring enthusiastic tidings of the popularity of the Lunts in "There Shall Be No Night," in Boston, and to say that even if the story does concern Finland, Scandinavian war developments will have no vital bearing on Robert E. Sherwood's plot—a fear felt about Germany and her "Margin for Error" by Clare Booth. "There Shall Be No Night" is next at the National.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 16 (INS).—Hotter than the Hollywood weather over the week-end is the deal for Marlene Dietrich to play the Katharine Cornell role in the movie version of "No Time For Comedy." For two hours Marlene was on the Warner lot going over the script with Hal Wallis, and it's dollars to doughnuts she'll put her name on the dotted line for she likes the comedy angle and the chance to wear gorgeous clothes in the role of the glamorous actress.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Originally, "No Time For Comedy" was bought for Bette Davis, but there are so many other vehicles waiting for Bette that Hal has decided to make the Cornell Comedy with another star. And here in another little tidbit: Jimmy Stewart, who was with Dietrich in "Destry Rides Again" may be teamed with her in "No Time For Comedy"—at least, he was reading the script over the week-end.

Movie news—good and bad—travels fast in Hollywood, and so Jack Benny's swell comedy "Buck Benny Rides Again" has been much discussed. I think one reason it is so good is that it is virtually a motion picture edition of the famous Benny radio program with all the characters represented. Jack arrived in New York Sunday morning and Mary Livingston left yesterday. They'll do two broadcasts from there and then go on to Honolulu for a holiday. The next Benny movie will have Fred Allen and you can just bet that will really be a battle of wits. Mary Martin plays the lady over whom Benny and Allen battle and of course Rochester will be with him and the rest of his air crew.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Joan Crawford choo-choos to new York this week and her first date is with Franchot Tone. Don't discount for a second the interest these two have in each other; the Don Ameche stork rumor is true and Mrs. A., has been in the hospital for observation; Kay Francis and Cornwall Jackson a dinner duet at the Florentine Gardens; Jimmie Cagney has gone into retirement on his yacht to lose 20 pounds before he begins "The City of Conquest," Carole Parker and Garwood Van, orchestra leader, acting as if they meant it at Sardi's; Gertrude Niesen and Wynn Rocamora dancing every dance at Victor Hugo's; don't tell the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, but Dorothy Lamour has been made a member of the Miami Chamber of Commerce.

Sigrid Gurie has been frantic trying to reach her twin brother, mother and father in Norway. She says she wants to raise $10,000 to help them; Mary Maguire, now happily married in London, goes into a legitimate show there. Her bridegroom, who has money, is reported as the angel of the show.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Well, at Least, They've Met Once!

MERLE OBERON AND GEORGE BRENT

as they will be seen in the Warner Brothers production of "Till We Meet Again," next week's attraction at the Earle Theater. This is a new version of the picture made back in 1932, starring William Powell and Kay Francis, under the title of "One Way Passage." Robert Lord wrote the original story which has been adapted to the screen by Warren Duff and directed by Edmund Goulding

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS, saw his biographer, Eric Estorick, instructor of sociology at N. Y. U. Estorick showed him newspaper clippings about this forthcoming biography, clippings which told of the many revisions necessitated by Cripps' recent up-and-downs in political power . . . "But now," the biographer sighed, "at last the book is finished" . . . "Well, here's the final correction," said Sir Strafford—and showed him the 300-000-word official diary of the trip, with his recommendation to be made to his majesty's government concerning India and China.

LELAND HAYWARD, who has an interest in TWA, is trying to induce Dave Chasen, the Hollywood restauranteur, to open a branch restaurant at Albuquerque, N. Mex., . . . "The planes stop there," Hayward explained, "and I think you could do business" . . . "In Albuquerque?" replied Chasen. "Do you think the Indians would pay me the $2.50 I get for a mixed-green salad—when for $21.50 more they bought the island of Manhattan?"

THE LAST LINE in the Warner film about slum clearance, which Delmar Daves has just completed, comes from the Fortune article about Slums. The line reads: "Look, you can actually see the sun comin' through the windows—you can see it comin' into the room" . . . Arch Oboler has been signed to write the movie adaptation of "Escape" for Norma Shearer and Robert Taylor . . . Shelia Barrett will inaugurate her concert tour in Albany April 18. Nezt month she'll entertain at the White House—her third visit there this year.

THE CURRENT ISSUE of the New Yorker quotes this item from Double Detective magazine: "'Yes,' he added softly speaking in perfect English," and the editor's comment is "The best is none too good" . . . The quote is from the Double Detective serial called "The Green Llama," written by Richard Forster. The quote was sent to the New Yorker by Ken Crossen, editor of Double Detective, who received $1 for it . . . "Forester" is the pen name used by Crossen.

PEGGY DOWD, who became the bride of Tommy Corcoran, will continue in her job as his secretary. "I won't leave that job," she said, "now that I know what can happen to a secretary . . . Fiesta Danceteria will get its first national publicity break in the new release of the March of Time. At the preview the proprietor noticed for the first time that he had neglected to add the word "Danceteria" when he had ordered his new Broadway sign . . . The "Sandra Gould," whose jewelry designs are being featured in the stories here, is the young actress who appeared in "New Faces" and "Having Wonderful Time" . . . Universal films will remake "Uncle Tom's Cabin," but is undecided whether to make it a propaganda film or a satire.

DAVID SELZNICK, producer of "Gone With the Wind," explained that despite the fact that "Gone With the Wind" has grossed $17,00,000, the profit is not as fabulous, based upon Hollywood standards . . . The movie exhibitors received more than one-third, leaving $11,500,000. From that is deducted the cost of distribution 15 per cent, leaving about $10,000,000. M.-G.-M. received $1,500,000, and the picture cost $4,000,000 to make, leavink an approximate net of $4,500,000. Income taxes reduced that figure to less than half—for more than three years' work.

PAUL V. McNUTT, in speaking of Thomas E. Dewey, said: "He's just a young man who talks like an Old Man" . . . Elliot Nugent, star and coauthor of "The Male Animal," will be the subject of an article in the Saturday Evening Post . . . M. Hoffman editor of Minneapolis' Golfer & Sportsman, has arranged an exciting controversy between Jerome Odlum and Allen Rivkin, the screenwriter and author of the new Weyerhauser biography . . . Before Katharine Hepburn left New York she promised Martin Beck that her next show would be presented in his theater, because her flop-play, "The Lake," was produced there. Katharine wants it said that no man ever lost money on her.

EVERY FRIDAY NIGHT, in the RKO projection room, old movies are shown to a select group of people . . . Some nights ago "The Yellow Ticket," a movie made eight years ago, was shown . . . When the hero appeared, in an early scene, loud feminine laughter was heard—and a man in the audience roared: "No, No! Take it off! I'm terrible, simply terrible" . . . The picture was stopped and the film returned to its shelf. Lawrence Olivier was the objector; the laughs were from Vivien Leigh. ....

Amateurs Are Engulfed in A Busy Week

Seven Local Groups Active With Plays And Celebrations

By Richard L. Coe

This evening's performance of "Our Town" by the Blackfriars Guild ushers in a week crowded with local amateur theatrical events. Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play will run for three evenings in St. Paul's Auditorium at 1421 V street northwest, with a portion of the proceeds going to the Finnish Relief Fund.

Dennis Connell will have the all-important role of the stage manager, which Frank Craven created. Edna Evans, one of the ranking finalists in a recent Hollywood contest, has returned to the Blackfriars to play Emily, and Ted Allison, Nathalie Core, Dorothy Davidson, John Mulroy, William Draper, Gordon Gray, Helen Johnson and Robert Lucey are others importantly cast. Edgar Kloten has directed.

This evening, too, the Community Center and Playgrounds Department is holding its annual dinner of the One-Act Play Tournament at Barker Hall, Seventeenth and K streets, northwest. The time is 6:30 p. m. and tickets are available.

Tomorrow and Thursday evenings the Pierce Hall Players are presenting "Whistling in the Dark," the mystery comedy, on their own stage at Harvard and Fifteenth streets. Once an Ernest Truex vehicle, the comedy tells of a writer of thriller stories who takes a house in the country for some quiet and runs into a band of criminals. J. Edmond Veitch, Julian Hatcher, Nell Childs, Sidney Bassler, James Parker, Robert Coren, Doyle Tripp, Edith Reynolds and Edward Quigley are in Director Paul Alexander's cast.

The Government Printing Office Dramatic Club are repeating their production of "Nothing But the Truth" for the benefit of the patients of Glenn Dale Sanitarium tonight. The new group also will play the James Montgomery comedy Thursday evening at 8:15 in the G. P. O.'s Harding Hall. George Vivian directed the play.

Lula Vollmer's drama of North Carolina, "Sun-Up," will be played tomorrow evening in Roosevelt High School auditorium by the Security Club of the American Security & Trust Co., under the direction of Paul Messink. Margaret Limerick, Eleanore Brasse, Albert Thompson, Dan Murphy, Robert Stuart, John Donovan, Herbert Lightfoot, Edward Brown and Ned Heilig are the players.

The Census Bureau's Dramatic Club, taking time out from its head-hunting, will offer a variety revue and "Those Sonnets," a one-act comedy by Cherry Lind, Friday at 8:15 p. m. in the Department of Commerce Auditorium. Colin Kerr Cameron will demonstrate his magic, Arnold C. Levey will be master of ceremonies and cast in the comedy are E. Lincoln Beattie, Eileen Truax, Moe Plotkin and Emilinda Cherry.

Rachel Crothers' comedy, "Susan and God," will be offered by the Montgomery Players Saturday evening at the Leland Junior High School Auditorium. Kay Wilkins has the Gertrude Lawrence role and the supporting company includes Edmund Soper, Marianne Hunter, Emily Curtis Wall, Rita Lowe, Arthur Sandusky, Howard Bandy, Lois Cremins, James McKay, Irving Day and Mary Harrison Johnson.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 15.

"The Young People" set is full of human interest these days. Of course, Shirley Temple is always human interest—and especially in this, since she plays the adopted child of Jack Oakie and Charlotte Greenwood. There's Jack, whose comeback does my heart good to see. I hope he gets wise to himself and sticks to swell supporting roles. Jack's a great feature comic, and they go on forever. On the sidelines is the only dance directing team in the business. They are Geneva Sawyer and Nick Castle—a heck of a cute pair. Geneva's more quiet than Nick—never takes her eyes off Shirley when she's working. She's as attentive as Mrs. Temple.

HOPPER

Nick is all over the place, will talk about Shirley at the drop of the hat. I was ready to listen, so he went on. "She's colossal—the greatest little trouper I ever saw. I'm telling you, this kid—what's her name?—" Even though he's worked with her for months, he still calls her "What's-her-name"! He thinks too fast to remember names. "Why, she does an Astaire in this picture that's better than the master himself."

When I asked Nick if she jumps over chairs and tables, he snapped, "No! Just over Oakie and Greenwood." So, if anyone thinks Shirley hasn't learned her business from A to Izzard, you should have seen her directing the still man how to make pictures of her routine, and I'll be darned if he didn't take her advice.

While John Garfield and Anne Shirley raked in well deserved bouquets for their work in "Saturday's Children," the biggest credit should go to Director Vincent Sherman and the Epstein brothers who did the screen version of the Maxwell Anderson play. In this play Vincent has proved himself one of the most sensitive directors on the Warner lot.

When he gets his actors to put a lump in your throat at the same time you're laughing, that's art. The humor is down to earth, not gagged up, and dialogue that you hear every day. It's the drama of marriage, not as we dream of it, but as is happens to millions of young Americans.

Anne Shirley has advanced her career no end by playing the part. And after seeing it, I was amazed that Olivia de Havilland and Jane Bryan both turned it down. Yes, Warners has done it again.

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, APRIL 16, 1940 17

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The national pastime, the big league club owners are pleased to call their game, and to the cynics it may sound as a commercial puff. But the national pastime baseball is. When the President of the United States rises in his Griffith Stadium box seat this afternoon and chucks a new ball toward the diamond, the start of another season will very properly be receiving White House blessings.

Povich

The game is thoroughly American, invented in the United States, played almost exclusively here and is an integral part of the Nation's affairs for six months of every year. It is no Johnny-come-lately to the American scene. It is 101 years old. It is both a participant sport and a spectator game.

Any doubt that baseball must be the national game can be instantly dispelled if the skeptics would take the trouble to cast their eyes downward when they are up in an airplane. Those strange designs that dot the terrain in every metropolis or farm community are baseball diamonds—thousands of 'em. From the air they stand out in bold relief. The air traveler knows America is nuts about baseball.

Why this affinity of the United States for this sport? Clark Griffith thinks he knows. The owner of the Nats has a pet theory. He says:

"The ball is the great American toy. Every American child at some time has handled a ball. He has learned first-hand what can be done with it, and how it can be managed. In other countries, the ball is not popular. In China, for instance, children never see a ball. They play with blocks and flat toys. Every man, woman or child who has caught or thrown a ball, is a potential baseball player or fan."

If the President of the United States were to lend his presence to the opening of a new factory or the inauguration of any other commercial enterprise it would be tabbed perhaps as crass. But he can attend an opening game with the complete approval of the Nation. The interests of Americans in baseball is akin to proprietary. It's their game.

Who are the big leaguers? They are the kids not only from New York, Chicago, Boston and San Francisco, but from such whistle-stops as Gastonia, N. C., Atco, Ga., Odenton, Md., Paris, Ark., Appalachicola, Fla., Export, Pa., and Findlay, Ohio. They come, too, from Ypsilanti, Mich., New Albany, Ind., Pageland, S. C. and Laytonville, Calif.

On the big leagues, the Nation's baseball interest is focused because there is scarcely a sector that doesn't boast of at least "one of our boys" on a big league team. The big leagues are the baseball pinnacle and the community that can say "one of our boys made it" is justifiably proud.

The procedure in reaching the big leagues is almost uniform—a vacant lot, a cheap ball . . . two-knocker, kid games, finally with nine on a side . . . a sandlot league, high school ball, college or the low minors . . . a good day at bat or in the field when a major league scout is on the premises—and a chance at the majors. Unknowingly, the boy who made it was taking a competitive exam.

The big leagues have their roots in every community through no less than 42 minor leagues. Assuming eight cities and towns to be in each minor league circuit, there is thus a bond between 300 American communities and the majors. But in the picture, too, are the thousands of youths performing on school teams, in the industrial league and on the the sandlots.

For a dozen years now it has been considered fashionable to declaim that baseball is losing its grip on American youth. Golf, tennis, football and other sports have been claiming the interests of boys who used to play baseball, it is said. But baseball has a last-word answer for those claims. It can merely point to more ball teams of all description now playing the game, and organized baseball attendance figures that have been going up steadily during the very years when the game was supposed to be losing its hold.

At various times the claim has been put forth that other sports are eclipsing baseball on the American scene as a spectator sport. Football men, notably the professional football club owners, point to the increasingly large crowds at their big games. But baseball has an answer for that, too. Take football's biggest game, play, put it on again the next afternoon, and then count the crowd in attendance. Baseball, you see, brings the crowd out every day.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, April 15.—For the first time in a decade and a half, big league baseball opens its season tomorrow without Lou Gehrig. When the man in blue serge calls "play ball," and those Yankees reach for their bats and start for the plate Lou will be sitting behind his desk at the New York Parole Board, helping to decide which of the city's convicted men can go free and which must stay behind bars.

CONSIDINE

We asked Gehrig today if it wasn't hard to be away from the Yanks, the team he helped make great, the team whose uniform he wore right up until the final game of the last world series.

He thought it over before he answered. "This may sound a little funny to you," he began, "but not once during the spring training season did I want to be with the Yanks.

"It's hard to explain," Gehrig said. "But when the sting goes out of you, and you can't burn that ball and drive it out there . . . Well . . . you just don't want to play any more. When your body no longer can do the things your mind wants it to do, there's just no more incentive. I haven't the least desire to play ball right now.

"Maybe next year or the year after, if I recover. I'll want to play again. Not that I will play again, you see, but I'll want to play. But right now . . . nix. I thought when this thing happened that I'd miss baseball like hell. But it hasn't turned out that way at all. At least so far."

Gehrig is not going to the opening game at the Yankee Stadium next Friday. "Too many people," he chuckled. "I guess it wouldn't be good for me to get pushed around in a mob. No, I'll wait until some quieter day to go up to see the boys. I haven't seen my old locker since Mr. Barrow decided to always keep my name on it. That was a wonderful thing for him to do, don't you think?"

The iron horse has gained 13 pounds since last June 15 when the insidious germ he contracted made a pale, hollow shell of him. He weighs 214 now, only a few pounds under the weight he usually strove for at the beginning of a season.

He believes that the new vitamin E injections he is taking will in time arrest the progress of his disease. "They're still experimenting," Lou said, "but I just feel that they're on the right track. It'll take six months or a year to find out exactly," Twelve other patients of the Mayo clinic are taking such treatments. Mount Sinai Hospital is trying the injections on 15 additional sufferers, doctors all over the country are watching Gehrig and these others for signs of recovery. The stuff is taken both intravenously and orally.

Lou likes—of all teams!—the Yanks. "The only thing that'll stop them from winning another pennant," he said, "would be for something to happen to that middle line. You know what I mean . . . draw a line from home plate to centerfield and you've got it. That line would be Dickey, Ruffing, Gordon and Crosetti, and DiMaggio. I think the Yanks can function with one of them out of there, but if something should ever happen to two of them—heaven forbid— the Yanks would run into real trouble. For instance, Dickey and Gordon, or Ruffing and DiMaggio . . ."

Lou says that all he knows about the National League is what he reads in the sportspages. But he thinks the Reds will be the team to beat, even though there has been a pretty general swing toward the Cardinals. "I've seen a couple of National League teams fold up badly the year after we'd beat them in the series. Remember the Cubs after '32? But I dunno, somehow I can't see this happening to the Reds. They've got a good hustling bunch of kids, and the added experience should help them. But at that I think they'll probably have to come up with some extra pitching talent, particularly down the line. It's unreasonable to expect Walters and Derringer to win 50-odd games between them again this year."

Gehrig has reached the most interesting stage of his parole work, and he has thrown every ounce of himself into in. This week will see the first of his releases and his detentions. He interviewed a batch of parole applicants ten weeks ago and he has just completed studying their case histories. He is completely wrapped up in his job, which pays him $30,000 less per season than the $35,000 he made last year with the Yanks. So wrapped up in fact that yesterday he turned down, with thanks, an offer of $30,000 a year from Bob Goldstein, one of the owners of Lahiff's Tavern, to act as its host.

22,470 Watch Fighting Fox WinPaumonok

New Mutuel Machine Greeted by Record Crowd at Jamaica

By the Associated Press

New York, April 15.—William Woodward and New York's new mutuel machines hit the jackpot today as the metropolitan racing season opened before a chilled, overcoated crowd of 22,470 fans, an all-time high for the Jamaica track.

Woodward, whose Belair stud has sent Gallant Fox, Omaha and Johnstown to the winner's circle in the Kentucky Derby, came up with another first-rate hope when Fenelon, a game son of Sir Gallahad III and eligible for this year's run for the roses, put on a terrific rush in the last eighth mile to whip five other Derby candidates in a 6-furlong allowance event.

Then, almost before the customers finished cashing—or tearing up—their tickets on that race, Woodward and his master-minding trainer, Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, came right back with Fighting Fox, most unpredictable of colts, in the $7,500 Paumonok Handicap. And Fighting Fox came home by himself.

Porter's Mite Second

He galloped under the wire a length and a half to the good over W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite, completing the three-quarters in 1:11 4-5. This trick gave Sunny Jim his third straight triumph in this traditional opening-day feature. He won with Johnstown last year and the Wheatley Stable's Snark the year before.

The customers far exceeded all expectations for wagering. Officials had said previously they'd be satisfied with $500,000 daily average.

For seven races today, the total "handle" skyrocketed to $821,946. Biggest betting race was the Paumonok, in which $152,032 passed through the windows, although there were only six horses in the field. Of the total take, the State and the track each receive $41,097.30 as their equal shares in the 10 per cent they split by law. In addition, they share the "breakage" equally.

Makes Expenses

Off hand, it's hard to say just which of Mr. Fitz's two victories were the more impressive, as far as actual racing goes. At any rate he paid expenses for the Belair Stud Stables today. Fenelon's gallant win, in 1:12 3-5 for the six furlongs, netted $1,000. Fighting Fox's triumph in the Paumonok was worth $6,400 to the winner.

Fenelon was out 13 times last year and won only one start. Today Jockey Jimmy Stout, part of his 117-pound load, kept the colt close up in the early going. Coming around the stretch bend Fenelon started to move. All the way down the run home he and Sonny Whitney's favored Carrier Pigeon fought it out, and at the finish Fenelon was a scant head on top, with Maxwell Howard's $20,000 "midget," Victory Morn, third, three lengths back.

Where Fenelon paid $12.50 for each $2 ticket, Fighting Fox was the lone favorite of the day to come in. And despite his top load of 130 pounds, he ran like the favorite. Straight Lead, a 3-year-old Preakness candidate, led the first quarter of a mile. Then Stout, riding his double, had the Fox take over and school was out.

Mutuel 'Father' In New York Gets His Just Reward

By International News Service

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., April 15.—The pari-mutuel machines which State Senator John J. Dunnigan "fathered" in New York paid him well today.

While cameras clicked this afternoon at inaugural of the racing season at Jamaica where the machines are being used for the first time in the Empire State, Dunnigan proudly stepped to a window and bought the first $2 win ticket.

It was on Time Passes.

Weather Man Holds Baseball's Fate Today

By Gayle Talbot

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, April 15.—Though the girders in many grandstands still are festooned with icicles and a cold wind howls across the land, another big league baseball campaign is scheduled to start tomorrow. For many it still is the gladdest day in all the year.

The athletes are browned from semi-tropic suns and ready to battle for those semi-monthly salary checks. The fans of 16 clubs are similarly in the pink after having digested a few million words of advance dope on the contenders. All that is required to make the grand opening about as auspicious as any in history is a break in the weather.

The forecasters are fairly optimistic, pending last-minute returns. In five of the eight cities the tentative guess is for "fair" weather tomorrow, with St. Louis, Washington and Philadelphia on the doubtful side. All are threatened with rain.

Ruffing vs. Dean

The New York Yankees, favorites to win their fifth straight American League flag at the unprecedented odds of 7-to-20, tee off against the Athletics at Philadelphia, with the florid Rufus Ruffing likely facing Chubby Dean on the hill.

Joe DiMaggio, the greatest of all the Yanks, will not play in the inaugural, as he slightly injured a knee in yesterday's exhibition at Brooklyn. Joe, incidentally, has played in only one opener in four seasons with the champions. Fifteen thousand is the estimated attendance; possibly an optimistic one.

The prize crowd of the day, 40,000, is expected to witness the opener at Detroit, in which big Buck Newsom, of the Tigers, is billed to face George Coffman, of the St. Louis Browns. Detroit fans probably are anxious to see how Hank Greenberg looks romping around the outfield.

31,000 Expected Here

Boston's Red Sox, who have been chosen by a small band of enthusiasts to beat the Yanks this time—and who might make it interesting for the Bombers, at that, if their pitching is passable—start against an improved Washington club in the Capital. Lefty Grove, 40 years old and the only 15-game winner on the Boston staff last year, likely will oppose Dutch Leonard, the knuckle-baller who won 20 for the Senators. Estimated attendance, 31,000.

Cleveland, popular choice to place third again in the American League race, faces the Chicago White Sox before an anticipated crowd of 30,000 at Comiskey Park. Bob Feller, the 21-year-old fire-baller whom Oscar Vitt regards as a potential 30-game winner, goes against Edgar Smith of the Sox.

The big noise in the National League is billed at Cincinnati, where Paul Derringer, hard-luck hero of the World Series, goes to

Scott Upset By Hassett On Decision

4-to-1 Favorite Loses Bout Before 850 at Turners'

By Al Hailey

Washingtons' Buddy Scott and the lads who gave 4-to-1 odds on him to stop Philadelphia's Irish Danny Hassett took a painful beating last night at Turner's as Hassett spurned the underdog's role and punched Scott all over the ring to take a majority ten-round decision.

Outweighed 15 pounds, Buddy hardly had a chance to box. Hassett rushed him off his feet with a two-handed attack that had him reeling and staggering several times during the battle, but was never on the canvas.

A disappointing crowd of 850—only 684 of whom paid to see the business—screamed for a knockout as the Philadelphian opened up in the sixth round with a sizzling right uppercut to the heart and a left hook to the jaw that brought a hazy look into Scott's eyes.

Buddy Springs Surprise

But this time it was Buddy who sprang the surprise. He came back in the seventh with a vicious body attack that forced the blond and slightly bulbous Philadelphian to back away.

Given a chance at the style he likes best, swinging from long range, Buddy pumped a straight right into Danny's jaw and followed it up with a flurry of blows to the head and midsection. His attack was short-lived, however, and Danny came back in the remainder of the fight to get the best of the going in a toe-to-toe slugfest that left Buddy's left kidney and back a mass of flaming welts.

By some strange method, Referee Ray Bowen arrived at a decision in favor of Scott. The two judges gave the nod to Hassett.

Hassett's Eye Cut

On The Post score sheet, Scott won only the seventh and ninth rounds clearly. He took the fifth round, largely by virtue of a low left hook that landed out of Bowen's range of vision in Scott's stomach.

Arch McDonald Again to Select 'Man of Month' Under New System

Those old baseball teammates, The Washington Post and Station WJSV, again this season will cooperate in the broadcasts of the Washington club's games.

General Mills, Inc., and Procter & Gamble will cosponsor the Nats' broadcasts, with Arch McDonald announcing the games over Station WJSV. From Shirley Povich, baseball writer of The Post, McDonald will receive by direct wire from the league's press boxes, the pitch-by-pitch description of all of the club's games on the road.

Thus, for the fifth consecutive year, Station WJSV and The Post are teaming in the broadcasts.

Starting with today's opening game of the season, WJSV and The Post will resume the Man-of-the-Month feature which for the past two years as proved a popular sidelight of the season for Washington fans.

At the end of each day's ball game, Broadcaster McDonald will name the players most valuable to the Nats that day, and at the end of each month The Post will reward with a $50 merchandise order the player who earned the most points.

McDonald this year will award points at his discretion after each game, a departure from past policy when he distributed ten points daily to the most valuable players.

Announcing the change in the contest, McDonald yesterday explained:

"The old point system worked an injustice on the pitchers, I feel. Because a pitcher appeared in the lineup only every fourth day, he had no proper chance to win honors for the month. By the new system of discarding the ten-point maximum, I can reward the pitchers more liberally. This year they will get a fair shot at the prizes."

Opening Game Officials Named

New York, April 15 (AP).—Umpire assignments for the opening games of the National League tomorrow were announced by President Ford Frick today as follows:

At New York—John Reardon, fant and W. M. Campbell.

At Boston—Bill Klem, Lee Ballan-Ralph Pinelli and Larry Goetz.

At Cincinnati—George Magerkurth, George Barr and Bill Stewart.

At St. Louis—Albert Stark, J. W. Sears and Tom Dunn.

Leonard to Oppose Veteran Lefty Grove In Nats' First Game

Cloudy, Warmer With Occasional Rains, Predicted for Opener; President to Toss Out First Ball at 3 o'Clock; Gates To Open at 11 A. M. for Ceremonies

By Shirley Povich.

F. D. Roosevelt a husky right-hander whose latest four-year contract may or may not be renewed at the end of the season, returns to Griffith Stadium today as the starting pitcher of the 1940 major league campaign.

One-pitch Roosevelt will chuck a brand-new baseball out of the flag-draped Presidential box on the stroke of 3 p. m., and then turn over the pitching duties to a lower salaried but higher skilled pair of hurlers—Dutch Leonard, of the Nats, and Lefty Grove, of the Boston Red Sox.

In eight cities, major league baseball gets off the mark today with formal openings but for Washington is reserved the feature show, as usual. Here, following White House custom first inaugurated by President Taft in 1912 the Nation's Chief Executive takes the leading role in the ceremonials.

31,000 Fans Expected

It is the Nats vs. the Red Sox, pitting the Washington club against the team conceded the only shred of a chance to terminate Yankee supremacy in the American League. And Griffith Stadium officials last night predicted a capacity crowd of 31000.

Even the Weather Man has entered the spirit of the times, and has relented on his early dire broadcasts of rainy weather this afternoon. His latest deposition was "warmer, cloudy, with perhaps showers." Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington club, declared, however, that the game would doubtless be played.

"If it is not raining by game-time, the game will go on," said Griffith. "We have kept the field covered by a tarpaulin for the past three days and if it is clear at 3 o'clock, the light showers predicted for later in the day will not stop the game."

Eight thousand reserved bleacher seats will go on sale this morning at 50 cents. Two thousand grandstand standing room tickets at $1.10 will also be sold, Secretary-Treasurer Edward B. Eynon, jr., announced yesterday.

Chief to Arrive at 2:45

Mr. Roosevelt's cavalcade of White House motor cars will nose into the stadium at 2:45 with the Army Band rendering the customary "Hail to the Chief" as he makes his appearance. When all dignitaries have been properly seated, the Army Band will lead a march to the flagpole in centerfield for the flag-raising.

Vice President Garner and Mr. Griffith will precede the players of both teams in the line of march and the Vice President will haul the flag to the top of the pole.

On the parade's return to the diamond, Mr. Griffith will present the President with a shiny new ball, and after posing obligingly for the battery of cameramen, Mr. Roosevelt will wind up and deliver the Presidential pitch toward the diamond. A scramble for the ball will ensue among the players who will prize it as a memento, and then Umpire-in-Chief George Moriarty will yell a lusty:

"Play ball!"

Griff Enthusiastic

Onto the field will jog the 1940 model of Washington's ball club, "the best Washington team since 1933," according to the chorused assertions of Manager Bucky Harris and Owner Clark Griffith.

In the pitcher's box will be the Nats' proudest possession, Dutch Leonard, whose knuckleball achieved 20 victories last year, in-

'No 1 Baiter' Praises Yankees, Then Recants

Clark Griffith, termed "Yankee Baiter No. 1" in a national magazine this week, last night temporarily forsook that role.

To the amazement of Washington fans, long accustomed to hearing Griffith predict the downfall of the Yankees, the Nats' owner, on a radio broadcast with Arch McDonald, declared:

"The Yankees are a real good ball team. They are a credit to the league."

Interviewed after the broadcast, Griffith reverted to Griffith.

"I said a good word about the Yankees," he laughed, "because I thought it might jinx 'em."

Tech Trackmen Defeat George Washington High, 78-48

Ed Barham Paces Mates To Victory

Scores 18 Points as Team Wins; Victors Gain Big Margin in Running Events

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, April 15.— Led by versatile Ed Barham, who contributed 18 points, McKinley Tech trackmen scored an impressive 78-48 victory over George Washington High School on the rain-swept G. W. field here this afternoon.

The Manuel Trainers piled up a big lead in the running events, taking first places in all but one, and then more than held their own in the weight divisions to win with comparative ease.

Barham easily topped the individual performers, winning the high jump, broad jump and javelin throw and taking second place in the 120-yard high hurdles. The victors had double winners in Jack Ballard, who took both the 100 and the 220, and Dick O'Brien, who scored in the low and high hurdles.

Allan Brown paced the losers in the scoring with 9 points. He won the shotput, finished second in the javelin throw and was third in the discus.

The best race of the day was the half-mile relay, in which Tech's quartet of Ballard, Daley, Ross and Dellastatious turned in the fast time of 1 minute and 30 seconds. The winners had a 15-yard lead going into the last lap, but Ed Williams overhauled Dellastatious 50 yards from the tape, only to see the Tech anchor man spurt, to cross the finish line a yard ahead.

Summary:

100-YARD DASH—Won by Ballard (T.); second, Williams (G. W.); third, Atkins (G. W.). Time, 10.3 seconds.

220-YARD DASH—Won by Ballard (T.); second, Renshaw (G. W.); third, Williams (G. W.). Time, 23.8 seconds.

440-YARD DASH—Won by Dellastacius (T.); second, Barnes (T.); third, Evry (T.). Time, 56 seconds.

880-YARD RUN—Won by Hollander (T.); second, Graumann (G. .); third, Bartel (T.). Time, 2:10.5.

Former Irish Grid Stars Observe Notre Dame Night

A trio of former Notre Dame football standouts were on hand at the Shoreham Hotel last night to help celebrate the seventeenth annual universal Notre Dame night which was similarly observed in 15 countries. Famed Alumni Attend 'Irish' Dinner Here

Bishop O'Hara and Rockne Praised at Notre Dame Banquet

Participating in a Nation-wide celebration of the seventeenth annual Universal Notre Dame Night, some 200 alumni and synthetic alumni gathered at the Shoreham Hotel last night for a banquet and dance and heard Knute Rockne and Bishop John F. O'Hara extolled as twin symbols of Notre Dame.

Dr. Maurice Sheahy, head of the department of religion at Catholic University, declared that Rockne's death was an irreparable loss to Notre Dame and every lover of sport, praising him specially for his "grit to take it" and "his loyalty to his school." Bishop O'Hara, past president of Notre Dame and newly appointed chaplain of the United States Army and Navy, was singled out for recognition by Father Robert J. White, dean of the Catholic University Law School.

"Bishop O'Hara," said Father White, "typifies the wants of America—peace, spiritual health and happiness."

Climaxing the banquet meeting was the transcription broadcast from Detroit of addresses by Father Hugh O'Donnell, acting president of Notre Dame and Elmer Layden, present Irish football coach and one of the famed Four Horsemen.

Principal speakers of the local celebration were Ambrose J. O'Connell, '04, Assistant Postmaster General; Dr. Sheahy; Brian Bell, chief of the Washington bureau of Associated Press; Edward M. Curran, Washington's United States District Attorney; Father William J. Doheny, superior of Holy Cross College, Catholic University, and Harry Stuhldreher, quarterback member of the Four Horseman backfield and present head football coach at the University of Wisconsin.

Among distinguished guests were Representatives Vincent P. Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa, and Robert A. Grant (Republican), of Indiana, both Notre Dame alumni. Representing Notre Dame's glorious football past and its innumerable gridiron heroes were Bergman, who blocked for the never-to-be-forgotten George Gipp; Forrest Cotton, an All-American lineman, and Wayne Millner, now a star end with the Washington Redskins.

Toastmaster for the evening was William D. Jones, '28, president of the Notre Dame Club of Washington.

Rittenhouse Wins Kilowatt Pin Sweeps

Carl Rittenhouse won the Kilowatt League Sweepstakes last night at Lucky Strike with one of the highest five-game totals of the season, 709. Bowling from scratch in the final action of the season for the league members, Rittenhouse won $20 first prize by an eight-pin margin.

Starting with a 140 game and then boosting his score the second game to 180, the winner finished with 125, a big fourth game of 162 and a final game of 110. He averaged better than 143 for the sweeps.

John Herbert, a member of the Distributors team, also rolled a fine set, 694, and added a 15-pin handicap for 709. Tom Hunter was third with a 683 total, including a 65-pin handicap.

The fourth-place Cameo Furniture team rolled a season's record team set of 1,772 in winning three games from Redman and Brown in the Electrical League at Lucky Strike. Jimmy Holland had 149-400 for the losers and C. Fowler 149-380 for Cameo. Walter Wise had 141-373 for the leading Wise Brothers in a triple triumph over Doubleday, Hill.

Hassett Upsets Scott in Arena

mass of crimson in the seventh by working on his nose with a left jab. But the rushing Hassett constantly landed with left hooks to the side of the head and that right into the heart and kidney. The gate was a scant $873.60 for as good a heavyweight club fight as you can find around and about just now. Scott weighed 177½; Hassett, 191½.

In a return eight-rounder with Cincinnati's Frankie Gilmore, 137½, Carl Guggino, 135½, Washington, left no doubt in the customers' minds this time as he pounded out a decision. His first victory was a disputed decision.

Twice Carl staggered the tough Ohioan—once in the first round with a stinging left hook and again in the third with a looping right flush on the chin. In carvin gout his fourth straight local victory, however, Guggino underwent plenty of punishment from Gilmore's rushing attack.

In a match that was no contest from the opening round, Paul Cortlyn, 1555, of Newark, knocked out Patsy Mattai, 153 of Philadelphia, in 1 minute 45 seconds of the first round of their scheduled eight-rounder.

A battle-scarred veteran with a quaint way of reacting to the sound of the bell, Joe Teste, 150½, of Washington, tok a unanimous decision from Frankie Tygh, 150, of Philadelphia, in the six-round opener. Joe bounded forth as the bell sounded the end of each round as though it were the opening. Maybe nobody told him.

Wilson and Tech Meet In Interhigh Opener

Rookies Dominate Both Line-Ups of 1939 Also-Rans; Heinie Webb to Hurl for Tech While Wilson's Mound Choice Is Undecided

At the same time that the Nats make their bow in the American League at Griffith Stadium today, officially launching the major baseball season, two other local clubs with considerably less class but every bit as much fire will be launching action in the big league of Washington schoolboy baseball, the interhigh series.

Rained and frozen out in their attempt to start things last Friday, the champion and runner-up will be idle, and the first hostilities left to a pair of 1939 also-rans, Wilson and McKinley. The game will be played in Wilson's brand-new stadium, starting at 3:30.

Both teams have suffered heavily by graduation and their chances will depend almost wholly on rookies. Tech, as a matter of fact, has only the pitcher it will start today, Heinie Webb, and Shortstop Chester Ciomi, left from last year's club. If Webb weakens, Coach Bruce Kessler has Charley Green, a second baseman with only a good right arm to recommend him, to throw into the breach. Backstopping will be handled by Charley Wilson, a small youngster from the junior varsity football squad.

Wilson's mound work will be handled by one—or all—of three choices. Eeither Briscuso, Koffman or Norman will parade to the post to start things, with the other two in reserve. All three, however, are novices. Calisto, reserve last season, will do the catching in place of Charley Garner, last year's standout.

Supporting the meager interhigh card are games between Bethesda and Anacostia, and Montgomery Blair and Mount St. Joseph's. Both will take place on the diamond of the last-mentioned at 3:30.

Hyattsville Nine Defeats Cadets, 6 to 2

A three-run splurge in the third inning, after Charlotte Hall Military Academy had taken a 2-1 lead, paved the way to a 6-2 victory over the Cadets for Hyattsville High School yesterday on the latter's diamond.

Behind the three-hit pitching of Sales in a seven-inning game that was played in a slow drizzle, the Hyattsville nine won easily, capitalizing on costly errors by the Cadets. Jarvoe and Bell, with two hits each, and nine stolen bases between them, scored five of Hyattsville's runs.

Hyattsville scored a run in the first, then dropped behind when Charlotte Hall came back in the first half of the third with two runs. With two out, Jarvoe singled, stole second and came home on a single by Bell, who stole his way around to third base. Farmer walked, and then followed Bell home when Shortstop Smith fumbled Cullen's grounder. It was Hyattsville's second victory in three starts. They play Greenbelt tomorrow at Hyattsville.

Daniels Gets Semifinal Shot

Maynard Daniels, whose last appearance here saw him take a terrific beating from Jorges Brescia after almost knocking out the South American with the first punch, yesterday was signed to fight the eight-round semifinal on the card featuring Nathan Mann and Buck Everett April 23 at Riverside Stadium. His opponent will be named later.

Daniels, a wild-swinging, dangerous hitter, is coming out for his first start under a new manager, Billy Thomas, old-time Washington light heavyweight fighter. He formerly was handled by Eddie Ross.

The youthful Marine whose highly vulnerable eyes have proved such a handicap to him in the ring has been sparring with Everett at Huron gymnasium in the latter's warm-up campaign for the Mann date.

In his last fight here a month ago, Daniels rushed out of his corner in the first round and nailed Brescia with a right to the jaw that sent the South American back to his corner at the end of the round inquiring if he had been knocked out.

Perfect Game Rolled in U. S. Pin Tournament

Detroit, April 15 (AP).—George Pallage, a mild-mannered, bespectacled, rubber company clerk from Akron, Ohio, jerked a matinee program of the American Bowling Congress championships out of its "spring fever" doldrums here today with a dramatic "300" perfect game score. Pallage rode to glory in the final game of his singles trial, as he threaded 12 consecutive strikes with a slow hook ball, for the seventh perfect score in approximately 2,100,000 games of the 40-year A. B. C. history.

Haverford Sailors Lose To Navy, 96-48

Knockabouts Used Instead of Dinghies In Rough Waters

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., April 15.—The Naval Academy sailing crew today defeated Haverford College, 96 to 48, in a meet contested on the white capped Severn River.

Owing to rough water the race took place in knockabouts instead of dinghies as scheduled. Even then the sailing was contested in the sheltered section of the river rather than in Chesapeake Bay.

The Midshipmen made almost a perfect score as they swept all first places, and copped all but one second and third. Top honors went to Midshipman J. W. Beatty who took two firsts and a second in the three races he entered.

Summary:

Favorites Win In Texas Tennis

Houston, Tex., April 15.—Nonchalant Bobby Riggs loafed through his opening match today as half-a-hundred contestants were swept from the River Oaks invitation tennis tournament.

He eliminated David Peden, Houston, 6—3, 6—2.

Favorites came through unscathed, paired against men of far less ability. Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., seeded second to Riggs, defeated Billy Pou, of Austin, 6—2, 6—3, and Bernard Jacoby, of New York, 6—4, 6—1. Because of the size of the field some players took on two opponents.

Colonial Nine Goes To College Park; G. U. Risks Record at Navy

The scheduled baseball game between American University and Wilson Teachers College, which was washed out yesterday, will be rescheduled for some day next week, A. U. Director of Athletics Staff Cassell announced yesterday.

The college baseball front will be totally quiet today, perhaps in deference to the Nats' opening, but tomorrow will see a pair of attractive diamond offerings. George Washington will invade College Park to play Maryland, while Georgetown risks its undefeated record with Navy at Annapolis.

A pair of local schools have tennis matches scheduled this afternoon. Temple and Maryland will meet at College Park while George Washington takes on V. M. I. at Lexington, Va.

Spring football practice is now in full swing at Georgetown with fierce battling for several positions. Outstanding in drills todate have been the veterans Augie Lio, guard, and Al Matuza, center, and freshman fullback Bill McLaughlin. The promise shown by McLaughlin is especially pleasing to Coach Jack Hagerty for fullbacks will be the Hoyas' greatest need next season when they seek their third consecutive undefeated record.

Senior Jim Castiglia, who alternated at the fullback post with Myron Darmobray last year, will be McLaughlin's only serious opposition for a regular berth.

The Georgetown track team, a bit disappointed by its one-sided dual meet defeat by Navy Saturday, is pointing for the Penn Relays Friday and Saturday, April 26 and 27, at Philadelphia. The Hoyas are confident of making a strong showing if for no other reason than Al Blozis who is accounted a sure winner of the shot put and a leading contender for discus and javelin honors.

The Georgetown one-mile relay team, which dealt New York University its only two defeats of the indoor season, also is expected to be a point-getter, although the opposition will be very formidable.

Al Houghton, Balestri Win Pro-Amateur

Beaver Dam Team Scores 67; Leo Wolper, Houghton Post 70s

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Beaver Dam team of Professional Al Houghton and Club Champion Joe Balestri won the invitation pro-amateur tournament yesterday at Kenwood, after Houghton started like a dub, but finished like a champion, and received able assistance from his partner for a 67.

Houghton was the big winner of the day, tying Leo Walper for first money in the pro sweepstakes as they each matched par 70's over the soggy golf course, despite the unfavorable scoring conditions. The Beaver Dam pro and another partner, Eddie Bean, were one of four teams tying for second with subpar 68's.

Four Tie for Second

Walper and Dr. W. R. McLister, Washington, were among the best ball 68s, Dr. McLister cutting two shots off his partner's score, while Mel Shorey and Art Cross, the pro-am duo from Indian Spring, and Cliff Spencer and Bob Morris, East Potomac, completed the second place quartet.

Houghton started with three bogey fives, and was apparently going to have trouble breaking 80. He parred the fourth, however, and then birdied three of the next five holes, including a putt the length of the ninth green, to go out in 36. Balestri parred the first two holes against Houghton's birdies and they were out in 34. Al went over again on the twelfth and Balestri was right there with a par, and then with three holes to play Houghton, former Kenwood pro, turned on the steam and finished 3-2-4, two birdies and a par, to post the winning score. Bean parred two holes where Houghton missed.

The Beaver Dam professional's card showed only eight pars, mixed with five birdies and as many bogeys.

Walper played more consistent golf, hitting 16 of the 18 greens and matching par on 14 holes. He was over on the fourth after nearly driving the green, and the twelfth, but regained the strokes with birdies on fifth and fourteenth, via short putts.

Cross helped Shorey one hole on the out nine and by three shots on the return trip to gain the second place tie. Morrris, former finalist in the city publinks championship, had the busiest day among the amateurs, pairing with Spencer for

They will face competition from a large field including such other topnotchers as Richard Skeen, Johnny Fauce, John Nogrady and Vincent Richards.

Archie Henderson, of Chapel Hill, won the North and South Amateur tournament yesterday by trouncing Charles Rider, of Malverne, Long Island, 6—0, 6—3 6—2, in the final round.

Henderson and Alex Guerry, of Sewanee, Tenn., lost the doubles title to Harris Everett and Marvin Buxby, of Miami, Fla., 3—6, 3—6, 6—1, 6—1, 10—8.

Yankees Face Athletics in Opener Today Minus DiMaggio

Red Ruffing Also Injured In Practice

20,000 Expected to See Macks, Champs Launch Season Today In Philadelphia

By the Associated Press

New York, April 15.—Injuries continued to pile up against the world champion New York Yankees today on the eve of the baseball season.

With Joe DiMaggio, their outfield star, definitely out of tomorrow's opener with the Athletics at Philadelphia, the Yanks may have lost another starter in Pitcher Red Ruffing, who was struck in batting practice today by a ball hit by Charley Keller.

Ruffing's right elbow was bruised and Manager Joseph McCarthy said he would not know until tomorrow whether the veteran hurler would be able to play. If not he said Monte Pearson would get the assignment.

DiMaggio's leg, which he hurt sliding Sunday in an exhibition at Brooklyn, was X-rayed today and the doctor disclosed the trouble was a strained ligament in the right knee.

He will not accompany the team to Philadelphia, but may be able to play Friday when the champions return here.

Although overcast skies and intermittent rain spoiled the outlook some 20,000 were expected to watch Connie Mack's improved A's try to fulfill their lean leader's prediction of victory. In January Mack said "I'm going out on a limb and predict the A's will defeat the Yanks on opening day."

Reds-Cubs Battle Tops N. L. Openings

Cincinnati Park Sold Out for Months; Lee To Face Derringer

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, April 15.—With the aid of Gov. John W. Bricker, the weather man, the Ohio River, and maybe Mr. Hartnett's Chicago ball whackers, Cincinnati's Reds will start after a new National League pennant tomorrow.

Gov. Bricker used to catch the slants of George Trautman, president of the American Association, in the best battery Ohio State University ever had. The Governor will sit right next to the Reds' dugout and if he forgets to yell 35,000 votes may be shot.

The weatherman is making no promises offhand, though there are furtive indications that it will be warm enough to permit taking off everything down to parkas and bearskin mittens. Both Paul Derringer and Gen. Bill Lee, the likely pitchers, are veterans enough to throw in any weather.

The river is under control. This time last year it was just short of the 52-foot flood stage and if the opener had entered extra innings the boys might have gone wading.

Of Gabby's Cubs, there is a little information. They may contribute to the contentment of a slightly doffy baseball town by losing the game to the Reds. That would spoil and eight-year record, for the Reds are so used to losing openers that they'll be thunderstruck to win.

On the strictly business side of the picture, every seat in the enlarged stands has been gone for months. At 10 a. m., 4,500 bleacher and 3,000 standing room tickets go on sale to the faithful who stand in line all night.

cluding four straight over the Yankees. In today's game it will be Leonard's knuckleball vs. the fading fast one of 40-year-old Lefty Grove, now buttressed by a canny curve.

Joe Cronin, winner of Washington's last pennant, and now managing the Red Sox, will place on the field a team which scattered experts believe will dethrone the Yankees. It breathes with power, with pitching as its only doubtful quality.

Hard-Hitting Team

At first base, Slugging Jimmy Foxx is back on the job for the Red Sox, and the remainder of the infield is a clever-fielding, hard-walloping brigade. The sensational Bobby Doerr is at second base, Cronin himself at shortstop, and Jim Tabor at third base.

Washington fans will be the first to glimpse the featured addition to the Boston club in action. He is Dominic DiMaggia, youngest and shortest of the DiMaggio brothers, for whom the Boston club paid a Coast League team $50,000.

Young DiMaggio, who plays left-field, will be the first batter of the ball game inasmuch as he leads off the Red Sox line-up. The first three hitters of the game, in fact, will be the Red Sox outfielders, with Roger Cramer batting second and the colorful Ted Williams in third place.

The Red Sox, chaperoned by Cronin, arrived in Washington early yesterday, and shared Griffith Stadium with the Nats during a workout early in the afternoon.

Nine Straight in South

The team that Bucky Harris will send on the field wound up the spring training season in a glorious finish, compiling a winning streak of nine straight and unleashing a final salvo of ten runs in the ninth inning to beat Baltimore on Sunday.

Making his official debut before Washington fans will be Jimmy Pofahl, the expensive rookie shortstop from Minneapolis, whose preseason performances have led Manager Harris to label the Washington infield as "the best since 1933."

It is a Washington team that features speed on the bases at hit-and-run tactics pending the unknown quality of its power. Gerry Walker, veteran outfielder obtained from the White Sox, moved into an outfield comprised otherwise of George Case, the league's base-stealing champion, and Buddy Lewis, this year an outfielder after four seasons at third base.

Cecil Travis is taking up the third base job he abandoned to Lewis four years ago and returns to the infield corner apparently a finished performer. At first base, Jimmy Wasdell's slugging and clever fielding have calmed the Nats' doubts of his ability and he is labeled with Buddy Lewis and Walker as one of the few "power boys" in the batting order.

At second base, the familiar figure of Buddy Myer has given way to a new Washington favorite, Jimmy Bloodworth, who dislodged the veteran Myer from the job midway in last season and stepped up the club's double-play production so rapidly that it led the league last year.

Cleveland Sells Broaca, Ex-Yank, To Jersey City

Cleveland, April 15 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians announced the sale tonight of Johnny Broaca, righthanded pitcher, to Jersey City of the International League for an undisclosed sum. Suffering from a sore back, he had been used principally as a batting practice pitcher this spring.

BROACA

Broaca came to the Indians a year ago as a free agent, after holding out during the entire 1938 season from the New York Yankees. He was used as a relief hurler during the 1939 season, winning four and losing two games. His home is in Lawrence, Mass.

'Sweet Sixteens' Deflate Semipro Baseball Coffers

Wichita, Kans., April 15 (AP).—The discovery that practically any woman will confess to being "not more than 16 years old" tonight forced a change in the policy of the National Semi-Pro Baseball Congress.

Last year the congress decided to admit all girls not older than 16 free of charge to games of the National Semi-Pro Tournament at Wichita.

"We thought we had a great idea," said Ray Dumont, Semi-Pro president, today, "figuring we could interest the girls in the game. But we ran into one obstacle. Young women of all ages over 16 calmly told the gatekeepers they were under the age limit, and we couldn't do a thing about it. These women were filling the stands."

Sun Egret Repeats in Harford Handicap at Havre de Graw

Battle Jack Is Beaten Two Lengths

Winner of Inaugural At Track Pays Off $6.70; Jay Jay Is Third; 10,000 Attend

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Havre de Grace, Md., April 15.—Running in a manner that seemed to say, "I'm sory fellows, but this is my race," Sun Egret, the little horse with the ability to carry big weight, drove through the stretch today to win the $5,000 added Harford Handicap just as he did last year. Sticking his head down and bounding along as if he liked the assignment, Sun Egret carried the colors of the A. C. C. Stable to the finish line two lengths in front of J. W. Y. Martin's Battle Jack. Just to make the result an all-Maryland proposition, Howard Bruce's Jay Jay was third in the twenty-eighth running of the sprint.

Second to Honey Cloud in the Rowe Memorial at Bowie and forced out of the winner's circle in five races this year, Sun Egret was installed the favorite in the field of ten excellent speedsters and brought a $6.70 mutuel to his backers in the crowd of 10,000. Sun Egret turned in time of 1:12 over a track that was slightly off but not enough to be termed other than fast.

Winner Hemmed In

Sun Egret came out of the gate in sixth position and was hemmed in along the rail as Speed to Spare and Redlin began a sizzling struggle for pacemaking honors. Redlin had a neck the best of it early and then Speed to Spare took command. Jockey Al Shelhamer, on Sun Egret, was forced to rate his mount when he lacked room to move up.

Approaching the stretch, the opening that Shelhamer had sought materialized. He was quick to make the most of the opportunity and shot Sun Egret through. Redlin had tired and Speed to Spare was weakening. Sun Egret disposed of the latter and then several charges began from back in the field. Battle Jack, Jay Jay and Lady Maryland came on but their moves were too late to bother the little horse out in front.

The winning money of $4,375 brought Sun Egret's earnings for the year to $7,375.

Trainer Pat Dwyer began at Havre de Grace where he left off at Bowie. The No. 1 conditioner at the Prince Georges County track saddled Tripit, a first-time starter, and the colt won by a neck in a field of a dozen 2-year-olds going four and one-half furlongs. Curious Coin was second and Madigama was third. Jockey Ralph Neves rode his first winner since his suspension and put up a stellar saddle job. The winner paid $9.20 and paved the way for a $45.50 mutuel for the 10 and 1 combination in the daily double.

The latter, off well and steadied along to the stretch, came willingly under pressure, but could not menace the winner seriously. AFFAIR, first away, raced on the outside of the leaders, came wide into the stretch and weakened slightly. ROYAL BUSINESS lacked early speed and closed a rap. SILENT HOST raced between horses to the turn and tired. CIRCUS was through early.

SOLARIUM saved ground to get to the front, set the pace under hustling tactics and stopped. BLAZING HEAT had early speed and weakened. NUDGE was outrun after the opening quarter.

Selections at Havre de Grace.

Dear Al:

Maryland fans will get their first peep at the Millsdale Stable's Andy K., second choice to Bimelich in the winter books on the Kentucky Derby. Andy K. is slated to march postward in today's feature. The colt worked out last Sunday, going a mile in 1:40, good time considering the track was off. Pictor, W. L. Brann's Derby hope and an easy winner at Bowie, went a mile in 1:42 3-5 yesterday. Both are expected to go after the $15,000 added Chesapeake on Saturday. Sonny Workman got into action for the first time this year on yesterday's card. A horseman tells me that the worst stalls here are those on the backstretch. He says horses stabled there try to get into every field that passes the barn. This causes them to work themselves up into a lather each racing afternoon. They get used to it, he says, but when they do it's time to move to another track. In answer to inquiry, Apprentice Jockey Selby Clark rode seven winners, five seconds and six thirds at the Bowie meeting. Tommy Daly is the fellow who handles the speakers at Bowie and Havre de Grace. Joe Hernandez will take over the job at Pimlico. Tommy likes the poor people and says "they're off." Joe goes a bit uppy and says, "there they go." Their job is a bit tougher than that of the chart callers. If they make a mistake everybody hears it. If the chart fellows make a mistake they can use an eraser. The old colored man at Bowie has his radio, thank you. The Kentucky Derby can't be far away when I received two badges to the Churchill Downs meeting yesterday. Art Brown will be lashed to that organ at Derby time but he plans to give that Preakness Day a big going over. Confucius say: Joe Smokey, getty all the cashy.

BILL.

First race—Distant Star won her last Bowie in clever fashion beating Codell in good time for platers of this class. She figures to repeat. Butcher Boy is reported speedy and was not persevered with in his only start last week. Pete's Prince displayed good form in late races and must be considered as a money factor.

Second race—My Lawyer had sped to take the top on Tedmelis at Bowie, but tired when called on. He meets much cheaper competition today and should earn the verdict. Kaptime showed good effort, finishing second in a recent Tropical Park race, and may be the one to beat. Timber Lady receives a good figure in this company, but may be tailing off.

Third race—Bud's Light showed good speed in her only start last year when second to Brown Slave at Aqueduct. She has the class to win if fit. Joe Smokey failed to make a favorable impression in his last, but a previous second to Little Mowlee at Bowie marks him as a formidable contender. Dulie has a fair chance off Bowie races.

Fourth race—Quaker Brass has been idle since last fall at Laurel where he showed good effort behind such as Faymar, Gallahadion and Sun Patty. His works over the local track should have him fit. Last Passage drew strong betting support when making his first start at Bowie last Thursday. Knitetta has a good chance to beat the others.

Fifth race—Andy K. has the class and the speed to whip the 3-year-olds who are pitted against him in this allowance event. The Derby candidate has been training well at Laurel and his final prep last Saturday over this track will have him on edge. Royal Man showed promise in Florida, but might be out of his class. Cockerel is a speedy colt and could make trouble.

Sixth race—Greedman has been running creditable races with higher grade platers than he meets today and if he runs back to the good form displayed at Bowie should take down first money. Count Tetrarch is reported ready for his best and figures next in line. Balapin likes the track and might be dangerous if ready.

Seventh race—Interpreter, after winning earlier in the Bowie meeting, came back to finish third to Howard and Head Hunter last Friday. A similar effort should win here. Brandon Prince is a consistent sort that can usually be counted upon for garnering a piece of the money. Erada demonstrated his fitness in last outing at Bowie and is a factor.

Best bet—Andy K.

New York Loan Drop Lowers Total for U. S.

Decrease Reported By Federal Reserve Reverses 7-Week Trend

By the Associated Press

Commercial and industrial loans of banks turned downward last week, interrupting seven consecutive weeks of increases.

The Federal Reserve Board said, however, that the decrease was due almost entirely to New York banks. There, business loans declined $23,000,000, while increasing $2,000,000 at banks in 100 other leading cities. This caused a net decrease of $21,000,000 in the week ended April 10 for the 101 cities reporting weekly.

In the 101 cities, commercial, industrial and agricultural loans totaled $4,393,000,000 on April 10, or $541,000,000 more than a year ago.

Spread of War Imperils Auto Export Markets

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 15.—An automotive market that absorbed in 1939 some $20,000,000 worth of the products of United States automobile manufacturers was impaired by the spread of the European war to Scandinavia, Ward's Automotive Reports said today.

During 1939 Sweden was the sixth largest automotive customer, the trade publication said; Denmark our sixteenth.

It noted that "it appears unlikely now that this market will be immediately regained, unless Britain re-establishes Norway's freedom completely, with military truck orders following. If Germany emerges the Scandinavian victor the Allied blockade will prevent shipments."

Six automobile manufacturers, Ward's reported, already have produced more of their 1940 models than the entire 1939 run totaled, and two others will pass last year's totals this week. The six are Packard, Hudson, Willys, Pontiac, Buick and Olds; the other two are Nash and Studebaker.

Denmark to Pay Bond Coupons

New York, April 15 (AP).—Holders of Denmark's 4½ per cent government dollar bonds received their regular interest payment today, despite Germany's conquest of the kingdom.

Guaranty Trust Co., intrusted with payment of the interest in the United States, announced it had obtained license to distribute the coupon money. A license was needed because of the Presidential decree tying up Danish funds, following the German invasion. The bonds in question mature April 15, 1962.

Money Markets

New York, April 15 (AP).—The pound sterling, and most other foreign moneys, improved in relation to the dollar in the exchange market today.

A gain of 1⅛ cents in sterling was seen by some dealers as a sympathetic reaction to the British decision to liquidate more holdings of English-held American securities.

While the direct influence on the free pound will probably be slim, banking quarters said, it was interpreted as another move by the Allied nation to bolster as far as possible her war-time financial reserves.

Other currencies priced higher included the French franc, the belga and the guilder. The Swiss franc was unchanged. The Canadian dollar rose ¼ cent to 88⅛ U. S. cents.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent.

Uncertainty Brings Caution to Exchange; List Holds in Narrow Range, Closing Off; Heavy Profit-Taking Cuts Down Leaders

New York, April 15.—Bullish operations in certain special stocks continued in Wall Street today, but the stock market as a whole held within a relatively narrow range and closed off an average of 0.02 point.

Strength characterized early dealings, particularly in the aviation issues, but there was heavy profit taking before the close which cut down many of the leaders. Trading was active, totaling 1,261,040 shares.

The war in Norwegian waters continued to be the first consideration of the financial markets, with domestic politics second and the customary indices of business a poor third.

Period of Uncertainty

This is a period of uncertainty if there ever was one and no trader is going to go too far in either direction until the outlook is cleared somewhat. The action today, while active, reflected the waiting attitude.

Fluctuations of from 1 to 5 points were numerous in the foreign bond list, and the majority of fluctuations were on the downside. United States Government bonds were firmer. In the foreign exchange market sterling lost 2¾ cents and futures were weak, while the quotation for Swedish currency was nominal, off 13 points. Money of other neutrals was lower.

Speculation in aviation and other war shares is being based on the expectation of large orders from the Allied forces. Steel and metal shares, despite last week's price-cutting in the steel industry, are getting a share of the war buying and the paper stocks are beneficiaries of the elimination of Scandinavian competition.

Aviation Hits a High

Most active stock of the day was Aviation Corporation, which made a new high and closed up an eighth. Lockheed added 1⅜ and Douglas set a fast pace by jumping 4¼. Among the air transportations, new highs were again the rule, with United the most active, Eastern up 2 and American up 1⅛. International paper, which just reaffirmed its prices on newsprint for the third quarter, advanced nearly a point and the preferred 2¼, each making a new high for the year. New York Shipbuilding, with a gain of 1⅜, was also at a new top.

Steels got no help from the weekly report of operations except that the small declining reported for the operating rate, amounting to 0.4 per cent supplied further evidence that the decline, which has been under way throughout 1940, has at least been slackened.

Despite the narrow net change for the market as a whole, there were 77 individual issues that broke through to new highs for 1940, including a number of special issues.

Bonds Are Unaffected

With few exceptions among foreign issues and speculative carrier issues, the listed bonds on the big board were unaffectde by week-end developments. Some of the rails were marked up because of apparent progress with reorganization plans. Most foreign dollar bonds dropped on the unsettlement occasioned by the heavier fighting in Norway. The great bulk of domestic bonds merely idled, and the total turnover was only $5,470,000.

Atlas Corp. Asks More R-K-O Stock

New York, April 15 (AP).—The Atlas Corporation, investment company, in a petition filed today in Federal District Court, asked for 100,000 new common shares of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation as a "reasonable" payment for its services in the reorganization of the motion picture company.

In addition, Atlas sought re-imbursement of $875,037 in expenses. The stock has been quoted around $2.50 a share.

Cotton Prices Steady, Advance 1 to 4 Points

New York, April 15 (AP).—The cotton futures market took war news with a grain of salt today. Prices plodded over a narrow course to end 1 to 4 points higher.

Small Nations Dump Gold Into America

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, April 15 (AP).—The little nations of Europe, frightened by German expansion, are dumping their monetary treasures into Uncle Sam's lap for safekeeping.

How this country has become the world's strong box, harboring billions of dollars in foreign-owned gold and bank balances, was thrust into the news last week when President Roosevelt restricted withdrawals from Danish and Norwegian accounts following the invasion of those countries.

Apparently sensing coming events, the Scandinavian nations hastily had been shipping gold and liquid assets to the United States. The big shift from Scandinavia started after Russia attacked Finland. Sweden in the war period sent $140,000,000 in gold, Norway $44,000,000 and Denmark a large part of its $53,000,000 in gold reserves.

$500,000,000 From Holland

Gold import figures indicate Holland and Switzerland, also under the shadow of Nazi expansion, likewise have put beyond Germany's immediate reach a substantial part, if not the bulk, of their gold.

More than $500,000,000 of the metal has come from Holland the last two years and around $100,000,000 from Switzerland.

It was still pouring in last week. The German coup in Scandinavia cut the flow from the northern countries, trapping some shipments in ports, but financial circles reported the safe arrival of $22,500,000, including $5,500,000 from Switzerland and $7,300,000 from Italy.

Nasis Lack Exchange

Bankers assumed Washington's action in limiting withdrawal of Danish and Norwegian funds was aimed to prevent Germany from seizing gold and short term balances held here for those countries.

Germany, with a war machine partly dependent on oil and other vital imports, has been short of gold and foreign exchange and the Allied blockade has sought to pinch off German exports to strangle her buying power abroad.

Mutual savings banks rank among the largest institutional holders of realty mortgages and the real estate outlook is to be considered May 9. Government and municipal bonds and questions of Federal legislation are on the agenda.

ICC Rejects Railroad Plan

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission rejected yesterday a plan to reorganize the Minneapolis St. Louis Railroad Co. whereby the concern would be split into two new separately operated companies. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, under the plan, would have held a first mortgage on one of these companies.

Approval of the plan, the I. C. C. said, "conceivably might be construed as an invitation for other lines in financial difficulties to seek the same relief and result in at least a partial collapse of railroad consolidation efforts."

Generals Bow To Briarley

Briarley Military Academy diamonders upset Washington Lee High, 5-3, yesterday on the winners' field at Ammendale, Md. It was the second loss in four days for the Little Generals.

Behind the consistent hurling of Clements, W.-L. held the Cadets to a 1-0 lead in the first four innings and in the fifth staged a rally to go ahead, 3-1. Four Briarley tallies in the eighth settled the issue.

Star of the Cadets' comeback, after a disastrous 24-0 loss to Central in their opening game, was Pitcher Orest Intintola, who held the Little Generals to nine hits in the full nine innings. He gave up walks and fanned four W.-L. batsmen.

the hill against Bill Lee, of the Chicago Cubs. The capacity of Crosley Field, 35,000, has long been sold out. Cincinnati's fans either have forgotten their bitter disappointment at the World Series, or have forgiven.

Frisch's Homecoming

St. Louis, equal choice with the Reds at 10-to-5 to win the pennant, opens at home against the Pittsburgh Pirates. It will be something of a homecoming for Frankie Frisch, new manager of the Pirates. He spent many a happy and hysterical day in the mound city when he was head of the Gas Housers. Curt Davis, the Cards' big winner last year, is billed to face Bob Klinger, of the Pirates, before a crowd of around 18,000.

Carl Hubbell, who looks like he might have a brilliant comeback in his system, is Manager Bill Terry's nominee in the Giants-Phillies opener at the Polo Grounds. Kirby Higbe will go for the Phils. Hubbell has looked like his old self this spring, and that alone should be sufficient to pull a crowd of 35,000 to the metropolitan opening. A lighting system for night play was installed at the Polo Grounds during the winter.

Brooklyn, facing the Bees at Boston, should be afforded a quick idea of its chances of finishing as high as third again. Manager Leo Durocher has selected his big "If" pitcher, Whitlow Wyatt, of the game knee, to face the Bees. If Wyatt looks good, and is not bunted out of the park, then the Dodgers will have to be taken pretty seriously. Bill Posedel is Wyatt's probable opponent, with the expected crowd a scanty 10,000, all chilled to the bone.

Mrs. Stokes Gross Winner At Manor Club

Scores an 84 in Her First Tournament As a Club Member

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, playing in her first tournament as a member of Manor Club, won low gross in the Ladies Day tourney yesterday with a 41, 43—84. The Middle Atlantic champion topped a field of 20 in the 18-hole event on the regulation course.

Mrs. L. G. Pray, club champion, tied with Mrs. Alexander H. Bell for first low net, Mrs. Pray scoring 89, 6—83, and Mrs. Bell 110,27—83.

Marion Brown's 29 putts won a prize, while the low total on the four selective holes went to Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, with 17 strokes. Miss Brown scored 91 for the round.

Mrs. Z. A. Jones was low net scorer on the inside nine, with 108, 36—72, while low gross went to Mrs. J. E. Randels with 104. Mrs. A. M. Picket had low putts, 37.

against the Brooklyn Dodgers here before an expected crowd of 15,000. The weather forecast was unfavorable.

Casey Stengel has honored Right-hander Bill Posedel with the opening game pitching assignment and the Dodgers probably will start Whitlow Wyatt, who compiled an 8-3 record last season.

Cards vs. Pirates

St. Louis, April 15 (AP).—Slugger Joe Medwick has kinks in his back and Stuart Martin's collision with a fellow player loosened a postoperation adhesion in his abdomen, so all was not rosy with the St. Louis Cardinals tonight.

Medwick will play in the National League opener here tomorrow with the Pittsburgh Pirates, but Martin's second base job will be taken by Jimmy Brown, who is himself recovering from a knee injury, as is Johnny Mize, first baseman.

In contrast, the Pirates ended their day's workout without a complaint.

New York, April 15 (AP).—Three rookies—Johnny Rucker, Babe Young and Mickey Witek—will make their big-league bows tomorrow as the rebuti Giants open the season at the Polo Grounds against the Philadelphia Nationals.

A crowd of 35,000 is expected out in clear, crosp weather to watch the newcomers perform and to see King Carl Hubbell flutter his screwball past the Phillies. Kirbie Higbe is the visitors' hill choice. The game is scheduled at 3:15 (E. S. T.) S. T.).

One of radio's most popular shows is "We, the People," a program run along the same lines of a good newsreel theater. It is a thorough and expert mixing of pathos, humor, news and human interest and for some unexplainable reason manages to keep its standard exceptionally high week in and week out.

Tonight's 9 o'clock stanza on WJSV is typical. For its human interest story it will have a 99-year-old Negro named Turner Hall who served as an orderly for Gen. Robert E. Lee during the war between the States. From this eyewitness account of a war that's almost legend today the program will switch to an eyewitness account of potential warfare when Margaret Bourke-White reports on the situation in the Balkan countries which have been the scene of a five-month photography journey she just completed.

The "We, the People" folk are convinced it's spring, so they have lined up three interviews with people connected with the typical vernal trades—hurdy-gurdy playing, sidewalk telescope operating and construction kibitzing.

Hall was born in slavery on Lee's plantation and was a house servant in the Confederate leader's home until the war started. He accompanied Lee throughout the campaign and was present when Lee surrendered at Appamattox Courthouse.

Clark Griffith, like "We, the People" folk:, is sure it's spring, because Griff's lads get the 1940 baseball season under way at the ball park this afternoon with "Dutch" Leonard sharing the Washington pitching burden with Mr. Roosevelt. Arch McDonald will be up in Wheatyville and starting at 3 o'clock, he will resume his Washington baseball career where he left off in 1938.

LEAP YEAR LADY by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY

SMOKY O'TOOLE—Pride of the neighborhood and daughter of CLANCY O'TOOLE—Retired fireman, a widower who is both father and mother to Smoky.
MRS. HETRICK—Neighbor of the O'Toole's and mother of KARL HETRICK—Who was to marry Smoky after he returned from a trip West, where he received an inheritance, but instead he married
DAGNE OLSEN—Another belle of the neighborhood.
TEX STACY—Young cowboy actor whom Smoky meets in a theatrical booking office.

Smokey O'Toole, after virtually being left at the altar by Karl Hetrick, who was to marry her, but instead married Dagne Olsen, has applied for a place in the chorus of a new Broadway musical production. In the booking office she had met Tex Stacy, a young cowboy singer to be featured in the show, and Tex helps Smoky get a tryout. She invited Tex to come to her home for dinner and to meet her father.

Smoky Served the Dinner

Chapter 8

SMOKY decided on the way home in the subway that Tex must have a dinner fit for the gods. Mrs. Hetrick had often told her the best way to a man's heart was through his stomach. It hadn't worked with Karl, even though she had practiced cooking his favorite dishes for years. But it was still a good old rule.

A thick steak, smothered with onions. Men always liked steaks smothered with onions. New green peas. Mashed potatoes with loads of cream and butter. A chopped vegetable salad. And she had plenty of time to make a devil's-food cake with lots of chocolate icing. Men always liked that, too. Then there were the dill pickles she had put up in a crock in the cellar, and she'd open peach preserves.

Clancy was astonished when she burst in with the news that she had to hurry because there was the best-looking man in the world coming to dinner. A Texas cowboy, no less. He'd been to college and had the nicest manners, really a gentleman, Pop.

When she had rushed upstairs to change her clothes and start work, Clancy sat for a long time staring out the window, his face strained and his eyes heavy with worry.

Tex, getting off the subway and hunting the address Smoky had given him, was a little surprised to find himself on a street of little frame houses in Old Steinway.

Shamrock, in her silver fox jacket, excuse for a skirt, and heavily made-up little face, looked more as though she might belong on Park avenue.

He found the number next door to the fire station and Clancy, watching from the window, called to Smoky: "Here comes your cowboy. But he's left his horse at home."

Smoky rushed from the kitchen, her face rosy from the heat of her cooking, and Tex was amazed to find himself confronting a completely changed girl from the one he had met in the afternoon.

"Howdy!" he said cheerfully, and Smoky was glad to see he had brought his banjo.

Clancy greeted him from his place on the couch and Tex walked over to shake hands with the invalid. He was so tall his head almost seemed to graze the ceiling and his bulk to fill the little room.

The father felt a little better when he saw Tex, for he certainly didn't look like a wolf that was about to devour his innocent little daughter. His gray eyes were clear and his handshake powerful. He looked, at least like a straight shooter.

Clancy Likes Tex

Tex, looking at Smoky in her neat little navy blue short-sleeved dress and green frilly apron, grinned broadly: "Are you sure you're the same gal I brought the chicken sandwich for this afternoon? Or am I in the wrong house?"

Smoky laughed without self-consciousness. Somehow, Tex was the sort of man it didn't seem necessary to put a front for. She had been thinking while getting dinner that, being a cowboy brought up on a ranch, he'd probably like her much better if she'd just be herself.

Clancy had put on a collar and tie for the occasion and was prepared to put his best foot forward in every way. Tex was the first young man his daughter had ever entertained, outside of Karl, who was like one of the family. Clancy felt a trifle uncomfortable in his new role of host to a cowboy who had gone to college.

Smoky said: "Well, you'll have to entertain Tex, Pop, I've got to finish dinner."

"Sure, sure!" Clancy rubbed his hands together. "You'll be havin' a bottle of beer with me, Mr. Stacy."

To that Tex was quite agreeable. While Smoky rushed into the kitchen for the beverage and glasses Clancy reached for cigarettes and after offering one to his guest remarked cheerfully: "Well, I guess New York seems pretty strange after a ranch in Texas, Mr. Stacy."

Tex allowed that it certainly did, and switched the conversation to the luck Shamrock had in falling right into a show. Clancy said he wanted to thnk Mr. Stacy for the important part he had played in her luck, and Tex assured him modestly it was nothing at all.

Smoky rushed in with the beer on a tray and Tex and Clancy consumed two bottles before dinner was announced. Clancy decided Tex drank his beer like a man, although he did say two bottles was his limit.

Smoky Proves a Good Cook

When the trio sat down to dinner in the small dining room, Tex could not hide his surprise.

"Where did you ever learn to cook, Smoky?" he asked with a wide, pleased grin when she served a plate heaped with steak and onions, potatoes and peas.

Clancy expanded proudly: "My daughter is the best cook in Astoria, Mr. Stacy. She's been cookin' and keepin' house for me since she was 9."

Tex was increasingly amazed as the meal progressed, for it was the best home-cooked food he had ever had in his life. Although he was lavish in his compliments, his appetite would have been sufficient proof of what he thought of Smoky's culinary ability.

Clancy flushed with pleasure and decided that the Texas cowboy was a mighty fine young man. He jumped up every time Smoky had to go to the kitchen, seating her a dozen times. Clancy agreed with Smoky that he certainly did know his manners.

Afterward in the living room Tex played his banjo and sang in a deep rollicking barytone that Clancy and Smoky applauded with wild enthusiasm and Smoky danced.

Tex told her she had no cause for worry about making the grade at the theater the next morning, and she told him he had the most beautiful voice she had ever heard in her life.

After Tex had gone Smoky sank into a chair sighing, and her gay mask dropped, for she was very tired.

"Isn't Tex nice, Pop?" she asked her father, and Clancy agreed that he certainly seemed like a gentleman.

"I hope the boys at the fire station saw him," Shamrock smiled wanly.

Dream of the Future

Then he said reminiscently: "I mind when your mother and I used to go and see Ann Pennington and Brooks Johns at the Follies, when you was too little to be up nights. He played a banjo and she danced, just like you. They were big stars, and made a lot of money."

"Maybe Tex and I will team up and be partners," Smoky smiled. "Ann Pennington was the girl with the dimples in her knees, wasn't she? I'll bet her knees weren't any more beautiful than mine."

"Well," Clancy grinned, "I ain't been makin' comparisons lately. But I've seen worse legs than yours, I believe."

"Tex says vaudeville is coming back," Smoky offered. "Television is helping it. He says I'm a perfect television type, with my red hair. Maybe I can get into radio."

"You can get any place, darlin'. Only you got to watch your step and not get mixed up with the wrong kind of people."

To Be Continued.

Soldiers' Songs To Be Given In Folk Fete

Army Choir to Present Airs From Revolutionary Days to World War

From the days of "Yankee Doodle" to the World War "Parley-Voo?", the American soldier has sung as he marched. Sometimes he has picked up a contemporary popular ballad and made it even more popular, as was the case with "There's a Long, Long Trail" during the last war. More often the tune he uses is an old folk melody; the words, a jingly rhyme composed by the marching men.

The martial folk song thus is one of the largest and liveliest components of America's musical heritage. This year soldier songs, sung by soldiers, will have their place on the program of the National Folk Festival for the first time. The singers at the three-day festival, which opens April 25 at Constiution Hall, will be members of the Memorial Chapel Choir of the Army Medical Center, directed by Chaplain A. C. Oliver, jr.

The program to be heard at Constitution Hall will include songs that have lightened the American soldier' burden from the Revolution through the World War. The origin of many of the tunes, actually antedates America itself by several centuries. "Yankee Doodle," for instance, is based on a popular English music hall song many years older than the Revolution; some authorities claim to have traced the air as far back as the Cromwellian wars. The first version heard in this country appeared during the French and Indian Wars with words deriding the Colonial soldiers.

"Hinky, Dinky, Parley-Voo" boasts an equally ancient origin. The melody has been traced back to sixteenth century Germany, where it was popular as "Die Drei Reiter." Since that early day, the tune has accompanied many different sets of words. "Mademoiselle from Armentiers," heroine of the World War version, is herself the subject of more than a thousand recorded verses.

As for "John Brown's Body," the theme song of Northern troops during the Civil War, many students believe the Brown of the song was not the John Brown of Osawatomie at all, but a Union sergeant of the same name whose comrades made up the song to tease him. The tune later was used by Julia Ward Howe for her "Battle Hymn of the Republic," which she wrote at the Willard Hotel here. The last war brought forth many "John Brown" parodies, among them "We'll shoot a million bullets in a million German pants, as we go marching on."

Other numbers on the Memorial Chapel Choir's festival program include "Tenting Tonight," "Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight," "The Old Gray Mare," "Taps" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" — the tune of which is an old English drinking song.

Tickets for the National Folk Festival are on sale at The Washington Post. Prices for the three matinees range from 50 cents to $1; for the evening shows, from 50 cents to $1.50.

Wallace Asks 21 Changes In Farm Plan

'Minor' Alterations Urged for Efficiency In Administration

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wallace urged Congress yesterday to make what he called 21 "minor modifications" in the farm program in the interest of "effective and economical administration."

His proposed amendments, directed chiefly at wheat, cotton and tobacco phases of the program, did not, he said, "call for any substantial change" because of his belief in the program's basic soundness. His recommendations were made in a letter to Speaker Bankhead.

Among general changes, he proposed amendments to which he said would:

Simplify the method of making payments to deceased payees.

Require persons entitled to benefit payments to apply personally therefor.

Clarify the definition of "market" to make the act applicable to the marketing by producers of cotton, wheat, rice or tobacco in processed form, and to include gifts under "marketing."

Provide penalties for buyers who fail to pay the Government penalties collected from producers.

Extend from one to two years the time in which applications may be made for a refund of a penalty erroneously collected.

Place upon the producer the burden of proving, in cases of dispute, that he has not marketed a commodity subject to penalty.

A committee of the unemployment conference of the House today recommmended immediate action on the Jones bill, to lighten farm loan costs.

The unemployment conference is made up of 40 to 50 members of all parties. The recommendation came from its committee on farm tenancy and unemployment, headed by Representative Burdick (Republican), of North Dakota.
